Schrott Holds Pre-Concert Open House

Noted pianist Walter Schrott, director of the Birmingham Conservatory of Music, will hold an open house Sunday, from 3-6 p.m. at the new building, 943 E. Maple, as a prelude to the annual concert given by Schrott and several of his students.

The concert will be performed at the Lecture Hall in the Detroit Institute of Arts at 8:15 p.m. Schrott will play the orchestral score of the concertos and the students the solo lines.

There will also be a summer course offered in all musical subjects this year at the conservatory along with several workshops for singers.

BITS OF BIRMINGHAM

Robert J. Mason, Birmingham pediatrician, holds that no child, born out of wedlock, should be labeled "illegitimate." He says: "Long have I held the opinion that all children come into this world through natural laws—it is only unwedded parents who are 'illegitimate.' Some day society will recognize these facts, and the so-called 'stigma' now attached to such children will disappear."

In Perfect Form

No, these girls are not trying to raise a tent in the middle of the park by Quarton Falls, but are merely one of several acts that ushered in the Birmingham Arts Festival Saturday morning. These four girls presented a ballet of a "Scarf in Motion," and the scarf was still only after the dance was finished.

Smiles Catch Carnival Spirit

The smiles belong to the coordinators of the "Western Jamboree," City and Country school's 12th annual carnival, Mr. and Mrs. James Ginn (right and left, respectively). With them is one of the carnival workers, Joel Feldmesser, a student from Detroit. The carnival is scheduled for Sunday, June 14, 1 to 6 p.m., on the school grounds (one half mile north of Long Lake road, on Woodward). Planned and staged by parents, it is designed to raise funds for scholarships to the school.
