B'ham Jay Cees Get 'Spokes,' 'Sparkplugs'

Robert Wink, local Junior Chamber of Commerce leader, rolled in on a suitable stick place in state competition for awards for outstanding service to the organization.
 He was one of 130 men to receive the JayCees' "Spoke" award, and one of 22 men nominated for the five "outstanding service" positions.

BIRMINGHAMITES Charles Chamberland and William Whitcroft also were among the "Spoke" winners; Wink and Whitcroft were among the 22 nominees.

Statewide and national "Spoke" awards are given to men who are highly active in their first year in JayCees work.

Birmingham JayCees were hitting on nine cylinders when "Sparkplug" awards were presented to nine leaders.

"SPARKPLUG" goes to leaders whose activities earn them 100 points, on a predetermined system during the course of a year.
 Birmingham winners were Richard Besson, Robert Wilson, Robert Givens, Birmingham Recreation Director Robert Roemer, Rick Depant, Jim Willoughby, Wink, Whitcroft and Chamberland.

A pack of vicious dogs attacked and killed 2-year-old Mark D. Draper in Hazelwood, Mo., Saturday.
 "A few weeks ago a dog got loose, terrorized Purdy street, bit a patrolman through the shoe and even attacked the patrol car," Sundell said.
 "But," Sundell went on, "the real danger occurs when dogs congregate—run in packs. There is almost no danger that the widely scattered loose dogs in Birmingham would ever get the chance to get together and gang-up the way they did in St. Louis," he said.

Delinquent Dogs

But No 'Gangs' In Birmingham

Birmingham has had its problems with delinquent dogs, but there is little danger that it will see a repeat of a tragedy that struck St. Louis, Mo., suburb, said Albert Sundall, Birmingham's Dog Warden.
 A pack of vicious dogs attacked and killed 2-year-old Mark D. Draper in Hazelwood, Mo., Saturday.
 "A few weeks ago a dog got loose, terrorized Purdy street, bit a patrolman through the shoe and even attacked the patrol car," Sundell said.
 "But," Sundell went on, "the real danger occurs when dogs congregate—run in packs. There is almost no danger that the widely scattered loose dogs in Birmingham would ever get the chance to get together and gang-up the way they did in St. Louis," he said.

Free Text Books? Voters To Decide
 The Troy School Board will throw out a question at the June 8 election "to see what the people think" about having students rent text books, instead of receiving them free.
 The school board feels it could save $9,000 to $12,000 per year by charging the student's parents $1 per set per class. The present system costs taxpayers about $18 per student each year, said Robert Dolmage, school board treasurer.
 The school board would assume the rental fee in case of families who could not sustain the cost, he
