

Mayor Goes to School

SOUTHFIELD—After getting a good look at the new auditorium and classroom addition at Southfield high school last Thursday night, about 30 Southfield and Lathrup officials sat down to a question and answer session. Enjoying the open house sponsored by the school board were Lathrup Mayor and Mrs. Richard N. Cogger (front), who were seated with (from left, rear) School Architect Ben Rollason, Southfield School Superintendent Glenn Schoenhals, and William Dolgner, also from the school system's architectural firm, Dolgner, Rollason and Rokicki, of Detroit. The newest addition cost $934,756.26, and completes the building as planned. It brings the high school's total cost to $2,905,231. Said Assistant School Superintendent Glenn Levey of the open house, "I think they were quite impressed with what they saw."

Extensive Rec Program Needs Backer

LATHRUP—A program whereby Flint city schools are used daily for recreation purposes and civic affairs is "a wonderful plan, but Southfield and Lathrup would need a Charles Mott to support it," said Lathrup Councilwoman Elizabeth Mitchell after a visit to Flint Monday.

Mrs. Mitchell made the trip with 19 representatives of Lathrup and the City of Southfield who were investigating Flint's recreation program, which is supported by the Charles Mott foundation. Flint resident, Mott is a millionaire automobile pioneer and philanthropist.

Others in the group which toured the Flint schools were Southfield school board members Mrs. Elise F. Lloyd and Charles L. Curtis. The group planned ideas for the possible use of Southfield public schools.

Mrs. Mitchell who represented Lathrup Mayor Richard N. Cogger on the tour, will make a full report to the Mayor at Monday's council meeting.

—and others passed to him from officials. An amiable, intelligent young politician, Sen. Kennedy stood at the podium and delivered his address with ease in a strictly Massachusetts manner.

QUOTING FREELY a range of thinkers from Dante to David Lloyd George, Sen. Kennedy told his thousands of party members what he considered to be the issues of the 1960 presidential campaign.

HE LISTED POPULATION increase, the farm situation, education, lengthened life expectancy and automation as some of the peaceful revolutions that will effect a change in national policy.

SENATOR Kennedy lingered on the revolution of atomic energy as a main consideration for any presidential candidate. He said Russia and the USA will continue to compete for world supremacy in the atomic age.

"Russia and the United States," he stressed, "can destroy a quarter of the earth, a feat not accomplished since Cain slew Abel."

Changing standards of living, military science, underdeveloped world areas and the heightened drive toward nationalism were other points Sen. Kennedy named as major considerations.

AMID THE SERIOUS nature of his comments, Sen. Kennedy humorously chided the Republicans and lauded the Democrats.

He called President Eisenhower's White House messages comparable
