Tuesday Afternoon-Tuesday Night

On Tuesday, Birmingham Fire Marshal George Scott (in photo at left) made an inspection of The Birmingham Eccentric's heating system in preparation for the winter season. Upon completion, he discussed fire prevention week (Oct. 4-10) and pointed out that homeowners in Birmingham should make their own inspections or call the fire department if something did not appear right. He said that 90 per cent of the fires were caused by carelessness. Tuesday night at 8:25, he was called from his home to the fire at the Restrict Lumber Co., 425 S. Eton, Birmingham.

After the fire was snuffed out, he discovered (in photo at right) that someone had placed a portable water heater in a cupboard and forgot to unplug it. Two cleaning women discovered the smoke and flames just before leaving the building.

France

in a motel near Paris for American tourists. Few couples could be more deserving of a chance to start a new life. (The Autechards' record of bravery and aid to American airmen proves it.)

Autechard won the Croix de Guerre when he was a French Army lieutenant before the fall of France. From then on, until France was liberated, he and his wife risked death at Gestapo hands daily. They joined the underground movement and helped to return American and British airmen shot down on bombing raids to England.

FOR RISKING their lives to feed and house the downed airmen, for their bravery and courage, the Autechards received three citations from the French government and a second Croix de Guerre.

The medals are among their most treasured possessions, along with the family heirloom items they brought with them to America.

Once the possessions of ancestors who played important roles in France's history, the heirlooms were declared part of the national treasure of France. When the Autechards sought to bring them to America, they were forced to pay a $5,000 penalty to the French government, which frowned upon removal of such treasures from the country.

Nevertheless, the Autechards brought with them Louis XV provincial furniture dating from 1745, hand-carved by a master French craftsman, plus antique jewelry, silver, copper and brassware, and fine china.

TO HELP finance the return trip, the owners are offering many of the heirlooms for sale. Representative pieces will be on display in the lobby at Cinema 14 next Wednesday. Guests can view them during intermission. At the same time they will be served coffee and French pastries by young women members of the French colony in the Detroit area, who will be dressed in the costumes of the French provinces.

Recommendations for the performance of the Sacha Guitry film, featuring Orson Welles as Ben Franklin and a galaxy of French stars, can be obtained by calling Mme. Gauthier at Trinity 2-6722, or Cinema 14 at JU 8-3977.

IF YOU can be sure, you will help fulfill the only dream left to a troubled, but still brave couple.

Mrs. Autechard reflected their spirit when this writer told her about having been in Paris two months ago. "Ah," she said in her delightful brand of English, "you make me dreaming when you tell that."

ments—government, business and labor. I think we have demonstrated very strongly that they can work together.

"I call it 'enterprise democracy.' It's set up to do something quite different from what classical capitalism is supposed to do."

DR. LARSON says our principle was summed up by Abraham Lincoln: "The function of government is to do for people what needs to be done, but what they cannot of themselves do at all or do so well."

This isn't socialism, Dr. Larson points out. He calls it the best antidote to socialism. "Socialism," he told his Town Hall audience, "says that if it needs to be done for the people, let the government do it."

On the opposite pole, Dr. Larson explains, is the reactionary view: "If something must be done for the people and if private enterprise can't do it, and if the government is the only one that can do it—just don't do it at all."

TOO MANY nations of the world think that the reactionary ideology—the old laissez-faire capitalism—still exists in the United States, Dr. Larson believes.

And all over the world, underdeveloped nations are beginning to "grow up." They're newly-educated leaders are looking around for the system that can best develop their nations. Our system, they too frequently believe, will not work for them.

These peoples do not realize—
