'Please! No More Help!'

Bloomfield Hills Lions do some clowning around at Reeve's Standard service, Maple and Telegraph roads, as they get ready for their "Gasarama," Oct. 21. "Gasarama" is the Hills Lions' annual money raising project. Lions man the pumps at Reeve's station that day and the profits are used in the financing of Lions' seeing-eye dog and Boy Scout programs. On deck for the day are Congressman Bill Broomfield, Ollie Spencer, Detroit Lions' tackle and possibly other members of the Lions' roster.

BITS OF BIRMINGHAM

Igham First Presbyterian Choir-master Robert Slusser pulled off a double-barrelled program for his choir's annual dinner at the church social hall Tuesday night. He introduced Mrs. Marilyn Taylor Savidge (just back from a European honeymoon), who has sung the feminine lead in more than 1,000 national road company performances of "My Fair Lady." She thrilled her audience with three expertly-performed songs which combined her fine acting and singing ability. Then Slusser's boss, Rev. W. Glen Harris, concluded the evening with about 60 choicest color slides of his summer's trip through 17 Latin and South American countries. Dr. Harris will be showing these pictures at a series of Sunday afternoon programs this winter. His color work with a camera is among the best this Wanderer has seen produced by an amateur photographer.

Lights on the police telephone switchboard were flashing like a theatre marquee after the big roar woke just about everybody in Birmingham a week ago Wednesday night. All you could hear was the jingle of bells and the voices of Sgt. Glenn Foltz, Patrolman Donald Moore and Frank Stubblefield saying, "It was a jet plane breaking the sound barrier." This wanderer was at the station watching them, fascinated. Also rushing in to find out what happened were Birmingham Building Inspector Andrew F. Butt and Birmingham country club manager John Brennan.
