PTO Brews Fair

BLOOMFIELD VILLAGE—It's scary but it's fun for the little children of Bloomfield village when they dip into the witch's cauldron each year at the Bloomfield village PTO fair slated this year from 5 to 9 p.m. Oct. 30 at the school. Defying the spooky lady (Mrs. James Couzens) is Anne Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Taylor, and Bobby Couzens, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Couzens. Chairman for the fair this year is Mrs. James Barron aided by co-chairman Mrs. William Herrmann.

18 Pair of Gilbert Lake Feet Get Together—Cha Cha Cha

GILBERT LAKE—Two heads are better than one when it comes to solving a problem—and some people we know of Gilbert Lake way decided 18 pair of feet were more fun than two when it came to solving the rumba, the tango and the cha-cha. So they get together every week for dancing lessons.

They'll be dancing tonight at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Jaynes of Timberlake road. The other 16 pair of feet belong to the Don O'Toole, Howard MacDonald, Robert Holbrook, Jack Lowmyers, David K. Falvay, Lawrence Hermans, Charles Armstrong and Les Childs.

Visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David K. Falvay of Deep Wood road is Falvay's aunt, Mrs. Harriet Hoag of Los Angeles. She arrived last Thursday and plans to remain for the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Aten of Quanton road turned a short business trip into a fall vacation and arrived home last week very pleased with this arrangement. They took a leisurely motor tour of Michigan wending their way north through the upper peninsula to Minnesota where Aten attended the Exchange club national convention. Returning home they took a different route which included a cruise across Lake Michigan.

A household of weekend guests arrived at the home of Dr. and Mrs. John McDonald of Shadow Lane recently to help celebrate their silver wedding anniversary. Relatives came from Winnipeg and Ottawa, the McDonald's son.

Eggerly Austins Host Los Angeles Visitors

BLOOMFIELD NORTH—BLOOMFIELD VILLAGE—Los Angeles visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eggerly Austin are enjoying a full schedule of entertainment.

The visitors are Mrs. Austin's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James T. Hird, who have been with the Austins for several weeks. During their stay the Hirds traveled east for a week.

On Wednesday of last week Mrs. James C. Zeder entertained for Mrs. Hird with a luncheon at the Bloomfield Hills country club.

The following evening the Austin's daughter, Mrs. R. S. Leasin joined the family for dinner at the D.A.C. Following dinner Mrs. Leasin and Mrs. Hird attended the symphony. Mrs. Austin entertained for Mrs. Hird yesterday at the Bloomfield Hills country club when she invited 20 friends for luncheon and cards.

BLOOMFIELD VILLAGE—Traveling to New York last weekend were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Backstrom of Gleggery road. They left on Thursday so as to have plenty of time to see all the late shows before returning Sunday night.

WESTWOOD MANOR—Celebrating her seventh birthday with a hot dog barbecue recently was Deborah Radtke, daughter of Mr.

They're Having The Monsters For Dinner?

SOUTHFIELD—The Southfield Kiwanian, the Kiwanis clubs weekly bulletin, had one for an "how's that again department" this week.

"Make your plans now for our ladies night Nov. 4 at Cregars. It looks now as though the Monsters will be our guests."

A call to Don Hanford, who edits the news letter, cleared up the situation for us. It seems the group had a membership drive recently and a dinner was assigned to the winning team. Team names were Burrows Beavers, Hand-Sford's Hot Shots, Wolf's Sweepers and Minke's Monsters.

In the "demonstration department" we find in the bulletin too that John Dunham and W. V. Viner were assigned to the boys and girls committee for the balance of the year. That will teach you fellows to behave!

Lady Employees At Southfield Like Their Boss

SOUTHFIELD—Southfield City Administrator Robert J. McNatt is spending his Wednesday afternoon seeing 22 of Southfield's lady employees out to lunch and for a tour of the city.

The first group of nine went last week. The second group this week and the third group next week. They lunch at the Stouffer restaurant, Northland shopping center and tour the city stopping at Standard Oil, Reynolds Aluminum offices and WXYZ studios.

Have You Met...

Gilbert Lake newcomers Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Bridenthall of Blandford, Mass., where he is a senior at Williams college and their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. David B. Hill, came from Toronto.

The McDonalds have been giving a series of small dinner parties which started the first of the month. They took time out last weekend to visit Walter at Williams college. Another son, Jay, accompanied them. Their next dinner party is scheduled Oct. 24.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Watson of Snowshoe Circle hosted members of the Gilbert Lake Estates garden club Sunday at their first fall meeting. Guest speaker was Dr. C. H. Ross of the University of Michigan who discussed "Romance of Field and Forest Botany."

Mrs. Farno Green of Blandford road was hostess Tuesday to the Mary Martha circle of the First Baptist church. Members made their own refreshment in the form of a scripture cake which they baked during the evening.

Mrs. Dale Miller will open her home on Snowshoe circle Friday afternoon to the PEO, chapter CS for its annual guests day. The speaker for the day is oil painter Charles Eddie.

and Mrs. Bradford Radtke of Westwood Lane.

Bobbie treated her second grade class at Wing Lake school to birthday cake and ice cream and her grandmother, Mrs. Calvin B. Radtke of St. Clair attended the school party.

WESTWOOD MANOR—Mr. and Mrs. Tom Peters of Westwood court recently entertained members of Peters' investment club and their wives at Sunday night supper following the Lions football game.

CHELMSLEIGH—Meetings and conventions have taken Dr. and Mrs. H. E. Lichtwardt of North Harbale traveling and visiting recently. They stayed with friends, Dr. and Mrs. Bernard Meeusen, in Grand Rapids when Dr. Lichtwardt attended the State Medical society convention and Mrs. Lichtwardt was a delegate at the women's aux-

Problem

HAD HE written the problem equator as four plus six, his teacher, Mrs. Elizabeth Borsvold, would have had him re-examine the problem. She would have explained that, what he already had was six (for six sheep were in the pen), and that it was four being added to the six. Thus, the emphasis is laid on arithmetic as a means of problem-solving, not just learning that six and four make ten. But in the process, Scott would still be learning this basic fact, too.

UNDER Scott-Forsman methods, subtraction, multiplication and division are not compartmentalized.

The third grade pupil learns the relationship of five plus five, two times five, ten minus five and ten divided by five. Therefore, he does not think of the four processes as unrelated segments of an arithmetic world.

In making his own equation, he "thinks" as to which process is applicable. And in using the term "compute," he knows the computation may include any one of the four processes.

ACCORDING to Eugene Johnson, superintendent of Bloomfield schools, this method, developed through elementary grades, will help youngsters "learn the foundations of mathematics that can be applied successfully to high school and college courses."

To Kay Flint, elementary supervisor, one of the satisfying results of the new textbooks is the enjoyment which pupils approach their arithmetic lessons.

"This IS THE second year that third-grade teacher, Mrs. Borsvold, has used the Scott-Forsman text book. She taught one of the eight pilot arithmetic classes last year, which led to the decision to change textbooks.

"Slower thinkers learn more from 'Seeing through Arithmetic' than they did from our former textbooks. At the same time," she said, "it is a challenge to the faster pupils."

MRS. BORSVOLT, like all elementary teachers of arithmetic in Bloomfield Hills schools, is attending 16 classes, throughout the year, under Dr. David Wells, mathematics consultant for Oakland county board of education. Dr. Wells, who is enthusiastic about the new series, is instructing teachers in use of the text books and the accompanying visual aids, which are an integral part of the new program.

If your Johnny is learning arithmetic at a Bloomfield Hills school, don't be surprised if, at the end of the year, he can not only tell you two and two are four, but why, as well!

Vote

Reviewing the proposed plan of Dorchester Hills #4, revised and resubmitted by Harry Rotiers attorney for developer Leo Riley, the council gave its approval providing documents are corrected to show the elimination of a controversial lot #54, which was less than the 30,000 square feet required for R1 zoning.

Rotiers and his client were complimented for their cooperation in a final summation by Thomas.

INTRODUCING a new ordinance designed to replace the present ordinance 8 on culverts, drainage ditches, and laterals, Councilman William Worcester explained the revised version would broaden control over driveways and driveway approaches.

"There is a great deal of confusion in the present ordinance and it is difficult to enforce. We also hope the new code will assure proper placement of new installations and allow us to have errors corrected," Worcester said.

Following an oral reading of the proposed ordinance, and a lively discussion, the matter was tabled.

Vote

until November when it will be reviewed and possibly amended before adoption.

RESIDENTS along German Mill road will be polled by the village marshal to determine their attitude about no parking signs on one side of the street as requested by the Christian Science church.

The planning commission will be asked to hold a hearing within 30 days on the rezoning a portion of lot #36 of Rosemond Hills estates. The lot fronting on Northwestern highway was once partly commercial, losing that status when the village passed its zoning code making it residential.

THE COUNCIL will also ask the zoning board to review a rezoning plan of expansion by Pauter's shop. Originally requesting permission to build an addition to an existing non-conforming structure, the new plan is for a completely separate building 30'x30' to be placed five feet away from the old one. Plans indicate the space will be used for medical and dental offices.

Plans for the new community house will also be reviewed by the zoning board, following a public hearing in the near future.
