Misses Eccentric In Her New Home

To the Editor: I can't find the bill for the next year's subscription, but please cancel it. It is not that I won't miss it very much—but it makes me too homesick for too many things!

It is obvious why The Eccentric has won so many prizes. Our new community newspaper seems like a high school publication by comparison. ALICE M. (Mrs. D. P.) WEDEL, 1441 Mohican Dr., Pittsburgh 28, Pa.

Want to Go? You Can, Says Uncle Sam

FT. HARRISON, Ind.—Young men in the 17 to 18 and one-half year group in the states of Michigan and Indiana, who have not been able to participate in the Army's reserve program due to lack of quotas may now apply for enlistment, according to an announcement from Headquarters, Sixth U. S. Army corps.
Many Army reserve units in the two-state area now have vacancies brought about by an increased enlistment quota. Qualified men from the Birmingham area may obtain further information by calling the Army Reserve center at Pontiac, Mich., 40 Walnut street.
This method of enlistment requires that the enlistee serve a total of eight years. During this period the young man serves only six months of active training at a specially-selected Army post where he will learn the fundamentals of soldiering.
Six months of active duty training must be taken within 120 days of enlistment. However, to finish high school this training may be put off for a period up to one year.
Upon completion of his active duty the soldier returns to his home town where he will serve the next three years in the Active Reserve. During this period he will spend one night each week training with his local Reserve unit and in the summer he will go to a two-week encampment.
When he finishes the Active Reserve portion of his obligation the soldier is then transferred to the standby reserve for a period of four and one-half years during which no training is required.
