

Old Subjects Taught Them New Lessons

by CAROL JURICA

Wednesday, March 30, at Marian's assembly, a play was presented which depicted a student, (Marilyn Golear acting the part) who was too involved in her studies to pay any attention to or consider the foreign missions.

Her girl friend, played by Mary Kay Dikins, failed in an attempt to convince her of their importance.

The student's subjects: physics, played by Sharon Michaels; chemistry, Lois Jordan; literature, Judy Lahey; modern history, Ann Fischer; ancient history, Mary Bodey; mathematics, Chris Ackley and higher math, Sally Honer, proved to Marilyn that if it had not been for missionaries these subjects may have been uncontrollable.

This was clearly illustrated by physics, who threatened all with her "atom bomb", proving that a force such as this, in the hands of an uncivilized, illiterate, pagan could be very dangerous. Chemistry's point was similarly proven. If missionaries hadn't trained the first chemists to use their powers correctly — for the betterment of mankind — it would have been fatal.

After each subject's contribution, the student was convinced of the importance of the missions, and proceeded to ask her girlfriend questions about their work. Cathy Connell, opened a and closed the program, introducing, and summarizing it by giving the background and the importance of the foreign missions, and urging Marian to do its part in the mission cause. The program ended; the students went to their classes, thinking more seriously about the missions, and planning their work in the future help for the missions.

Inside the 'Y' They Plan to Paddle Their Own Canoes

This summer there will be a one-week canoe trip sponsored by the Birmingham YMCA. Plans for the trip are now in the fire. Any boy in senior high school can be eligible.

Only three canoes will be which places a limitation upon the number who can go. The second and third weeks of August are the general dates. Those interested can contact Con Ekens at the Birmingham YMCA.

WE SHOULD like to mention a change of pace with regards to boys and the source of money for their camp fees.

This year boys who are going to camp are invited to earn part of their way by selling candy mints. In this case it is the boy who is "up front." He and his camp experience are the purpose for this sale. Outside of the actual cost of the candy and a ten per cent contribution to help other boys around the world through World Service everything the boy earns is credited to his camping account.

When one buys candy mints during April, 11-23, the sale, he is buying candy from a boy who is going to camp rather than from the YMCA.

Pool Full Tuesdays

The Barnum Swim class which meets on Tuesday night is filled to the brim. Both the beginner and advanced classes are closed to boys. Girls are being put on the waiting list. Bill Pratt is in charge of both classes.

The Barnum Swim class does not meet on April 19.

Room for Adults ...

Twenty men and women 18 and over have enrolled in the spring session of the Adult Swim class. There is room for five more people. This class does not meet on April 18.

Since many of the people who began last fall have advanced into the Flying Fish and Shark class, this swim class includes beginners, intermediates and advance swimmers.

Bill Pratt is in charge of the Monday night Adult Swim class. He is assisted by Bill Phillips and Bob Dutton.

... and Boy Swimmers

The Spring course of the Saturday Swim class got underway on March 26 at Barnum pool. This is a class for boys 8 to 13. The time is 11:45 a.m. to 1 p.m.

There is room for ten more boys in the class.

New instructors are John Emmett, Jim Grossman, Dick Watkins and Steve Born. The Saturday Swim class does not meet on April 16 and 23. The class runs through June 11. George Ewing is in charge.

Question of Cost

Several people have raised the question "why does the Y.M.C.A. charge a boy four dollars to enroll in the Saturday Swim class when no fee is charged for Tuesday nights?"

Both swim classes do meet at the same pool at Barnum Junior high school. However, all instructors are volunteers on Tuesday evenings and the Board of Education permits the use of the pool free of charge.

On Saturday the 'Y' is required to pay the standard rate of $15
