Speaks at Dedication

U. S. Senator Phillip Hart spoke Sunday at the dedication ceremony at the new City and Country school for gifted children, 2190 N. Woodward, Bloomfield Hills. Architects of the building, Begrow and Brown, 277 N. Bates, Birmingham, earned Wednesday that they have been awarded a special citation for outstanding design from the American Association of School Administrators. The award will be presented at the association's national convention in Philadelphia. The prize-winning structure is the first building in a long range plan which will eventually include a junior and senior high school and an auditorium.

Our Swans Rescued From Quarton Lake

If it hadn't been for three rescuers, Birmingham wouldn't have its two white swans today. The birds were retrieved from the frozen water of Quarton lake Saturday by Albert Sundell, city animal commissioner; Jack Fawcett, a city meter reader; and Arthur Birkholz, a policeman. Sundell, a civilian employee of the police department, will keep the swans at his three-acre residence near Rochester for the winter. Sundell was summoned Saturday when the birds were frozen in near the Oak street bridge. They were nearly exhausted.

HE BORROWED A rowboat from the Quarton lake home of Marshall Fredericks, internationally famous sculptor who gave the birds to the city, and, with Fawcett accompanying him, set out on the lake.

As they headed for the swans, a cocker spaniel dived into the water, intent on getting there first. The dog succeeded — but broke through the ice. Its barks of distress brought Patrolman Arthur Birkholz to the scene. Sundell and Fawcett sat in the boat on one side of the lake; and Birkholz, a tall man, set out across the ice on foot. By the time he reached the birds, the female was exhausted.

"SHE LAID HER long neck on the seat of the boat and didn't make a move until we got near the male," Sundell said. Then she took off—followed by the dog, dashing across the lake and heading for home. Birkholz left to dry out, and Sundell later tired out the swans until he could reach them with a pole.

He succeeded in rescuing the swans and took them to his Rochester home for the winter.

Pine Street Paving Declined by B'ham City Commissioners

Thanks for the offer, but we prefer to adhere to our present standards for road paving. That's the essence of the Birmingham City Commissioner's decision regarding Bloomfield town-ship's offer to improve two blocks of Pine street in the Bloomfield Village subdivision at the west end of Birmingham.

IN A LETTER to the commission, Township Supervisor Arno L. Hulet explained that the section of Pine from one-half block east of Glenbury to one-half block west of Westwood could be included in a paving project consisting of black-top over a compacted gravel base.

Commissioners instructed City Manager I. R. Gare to write Hulet explaining that Birmingham first to maintain its policy of cement concrete for streets, with integral roll curbs.

Request by Kresge OK'd by Commission

City commissioners approved Monday night a request by the S. S. Kresge company for authority to proceed with a building improvement which would encroach on the public right-of-way.

Kresge requested permission to place a facing material on its building at 183-87-91 N. Woodward in Birmingham as part of its store modernization program.

The encroachment would be very small and would not interfere in any way with the right-of-way, commissioners were told.

Commissioners approved the request and sent it on to the city attorney for legal interpretation.
