B'ham Approves Northlawn Bridge Construction Plans

Preliminary plans have been approved for construction of the Northlawn bridge. Birmingham city commissioners gave the plans their blessing Monday night and authorized the engineers to proceed with final construction drawings. The bridge, to be built of concrete with steel beams, will span the Rouge River on Northlawn between Pleasant and Latham near Fairway.

SIMILAR TO the present W. Maple bridge, it will be of the standard 28 feet width.

Refunds, New Assessments Draw Approval

Refunds in one special assessment district and reassessments in two others were authorized Monday night by Birmingham city commissioners. All work on the Redding Road sewer, from Lake Park to Rouge River, has been completed, leaving an unexpended balance of $293.76. This money will be refunded on a pro rata basis to participating property owners.

A deficiency of $121.21 existed after work was completed on the Redding Road pavement from Lake Park to Woodward, and commissioners decided to assess this amount to the participants.

HOWEVER, THEY waived collection of any assessment under $1. A deficiency of $616.03 was left upon completion of the Forest Ave. sewer, and city commissioners likewise decided to assess this amount to the participants. The city assessor was directed to prepare a deficiency roll to be spread on three installments.

Swallowing your pride will never give you indigestion.

B'ham Stays Out Of Detroit's Old City Hall Battle

Birmingham will not take sides in Detroit's Old City Hall controversy, city commissioners decided Monday night. The Save Old City Hall committee, in a letter signed by its president, J. W. O'Meara, invited the commission's consideration of and participation in this matter. But Commissioner Carl F. Ingraham had this to say: "I don't think it's any business of Birmingham or anyone else's of what the city of Detroit does with their property anymore than it is their business of what we do with ours. It's a matter of concern to them, not us."

THE COMMISSION decided that the mayor would write a letter to the committee acknowledging receipt of their letter and stating that "this is not our affair." Detroit's city government has decided to remove the building, but there has been a strong effort by other groups to preserve the structure, which dates back to 1880.

THE NEW Caprice BY CONN
...and what CONN's new TRANSISTOR KEYING means to you
The use of transistors in electronic products usually suggests a miniature version of earlier models but this is not the case with the New Caprice Organ. On the contrary, the development of Conn Transistor Keying has made it possible to expand the keyboard, to add more voices and more versatility without enlarging the organ itself. The New Caprice represents the greatest source of enjoyment, the greatest tonal integrity and the greatest value we have ever offered in a budget-priced home organ. And like all Conns, it is easy to play... easy to own. Come in soon—see and hear for yourself!
