

Dual Program Held At Local School

LATHRUP — Youngsters at Northbrook School (kindergarten thru 6th grade) held their annual holiday program Tuesday evening. "Christmas in Foreign Lands and Home" consisted of a story woven around Christmas music. The program was under the direction of music teacher Audrey Soyak. The following evening, seventh graders held forth at an all-musical program, highlighted by choral and instrumental work. Teachers in charge were Katherine Jlanopoulos, Frank Lane and Nancy Slawson.

Boy Finds Christmas Spirit Is Contagious

CRANBROOK VILLAGE — In case you think there isn't one (ah-ha, the children will hear you), just ask David Kottke, son of the Raymond Kottkes of Chalmers Drive. He knows 'cause he mailed his list to the jolly gentleman and remarked in his letter that he was down with chicken pox and couldn't pay his usual visit to Northland's light. Naturally, he had a caller the week before Christmas—a great, big fella dressed in red—who somehow squeezed himself into a compact car. Equally naturally, Father Kottke has it all on film, thanks to the Southfield Post Office who forwarded the letter and thanks to a certain gentleman from the North Pole.

was Dec. 18 and Mrs. Coury is still answering the phone and giving out the recipe. It was an egg-nog party at the H. J. Nurbeye home for neighbors and friends the day after Christmas. They have been Cranbrook residents since August, moving to Framingham drive from Chicago.

A morning coffee rang in the Yule season for neighborhood gala. Mrs. Earl Schmidt of Autumn Lane was the hostess. Guests included Martin Clark, Helen Swearingen, Pat Semivan, Betty Foster, Marg Scemine, and Lee Landers as well as Eleanor Gabler, Edith Hobbs, Ruth Kent, Jean Henry, Marg Binder, Audrey Durward and Fran Johnson.

The Young in Heart

LATHRUP—Todd Grant, a center of the University of Michigan football squad, calls the plays for some of the children at University Hospital, Ann Arbor, just before the big day. The Yule party for the youngsters was sponsored by his Todd's Fraternity, Delta Tau Delta and also by Delta Delta Delta sorority. The youthful Santa's helper lives at 19020 Bungalow Drive.

Christmas Displays Attract Sight-Seers

LATHRUP — Lathrup police jokingly tell Nelson Mulligan that they are considering a traffic light near his house to help control the sight-seers. Reason: the spectacular Christmas display on the grounds of his home on Meadowood, plus a four-foot Santa dressed in white velvet and gold sequins who bows to onlookers from the Mulligan's living room window.

Some 3,000 Italian lights adorn the trees and shrubs on their property. In addition, there is a white star framed in blue lights atop the patio; an almost life-size nativity scene; windmills on the roof and, of course, Rudolph the red-nosed one.

We hear the inside is worth seeing also. (Daughter Glorienne says 25 nuns, including president Sister Lucille of Merry College came out to have tea and see the sights last Thursday.) There was plenty to see.

While you are celebrating New Year's Eve, friends of the Charles Walkers will watch the clock on Hogmanay (that's Scotch for the big night) and minutes after, the Walkers can begin to expect the "first fitting."

Born and raised in Scotland, the Walkers tell us the custom over there is for guests to come, bearing any thing from a small remembrance to a bottle of the old stuff—in return, of course, they are fed to a faretheewell.

The first foot over the door still brings good luck, hence the First Fitting . . . of the New Year.

That very successful Fats for Care was given by Girl Scouts from Troop 256 a week before Christmas. They held their fair in the rummage room of co-leader Mrs. Harry Kirk and there were a white elephant booth, game booths, and spots to buy cookies, fudge and popcorn.

Care Clark won the door prize—a Christmas tree. Mrs. Mary Madison is the leader of the troop. And Cubs from Pack 1685 held their annual Yule program at Northbrook School on Dec. 18 with some 100 family members present. Refreshments were potluck and plenty. Fathers joined the fun and entertained with a skit satirizing television's Flintstones.
