

'It Could Happen to You' It Did for Mrs. Stecker

WING LAKE — Just back from a most exciting adventure in California is Mrs. Walter Stecker of Wing Lake road. Mrs. Stecker and her daughter Marion, 4, were the guests of the TV show, "It Could Be You."

It all happened as a result of a letter Mrs. Stecker wrote to the show telling them about her identical twin sister, Mrs. William Wallace, who lives in Riverside, Calif. They hadn't seen each other in many years and just three weeks after Mrs. Stecker sent the letter, arrangements for the trip were made.

Her sister knew nothing of the plans until they met on the show which was taped Jan. 8 in Hollywood and shown locally Jan. 15. Mrs. Stecker and Marion returned to Riverside to spend two weeks visiting her sister and family. They returned last Friday still dazzled by all the royal treatment

They will visit the Novi Sawmill and Lumber Co. Jan. 28 to see lumber milled at the only remaining complete lumber camp in the Detroit area. Another trip is scheduled Feb. 4 when they will visit the Lakeside Market at Wallace Lake to see meat butchering.

Several of the girls have been interested in writing and producing their own plays. They have scheduled a series of these one-act shows for the year. Paula Cole presented the first show, Patty Smith is preparing the Feb. 11 production. The remaining writer-producer-directors are Debbie O'Grady, Andy Odle and Linda Barton.

Good for the Nerves

While some men prefer golf or fishing for relaxation, J. Reed Alexander gets away from it all by zooming into the clouds with his Piper Tri-Pacer airplane. He had just come down from a late-afternoon hop last week when The Birmingham Eccentric's photographer caught him, ready to hop out alongside the waiting room at Berz airport. Alexander, of 5411 Lane Lake road, Bloomfield township, says he flies "for kicks" and to take the family on pleasure trips.
