Storm Causes Light Damage

The violent thunderstorm which swept into the Birmingham area late Saturday night and early Sunday morning caused relatively light property damage.

Winds tore down a large tree at Lincoln and Southfield, Charles Gale, director of forestry and parks reported, but that was the only tree damage reported.

"I WAS SURPRISED at the little damage which was done," Gale said.

Several power lines were down on the east side of Pierce, just north of Lincoln, Harlan Ritze, assistant division manager of Oakland sales, Detroit Edison reported.

Several hundred people lost electrical service at about 12:55 a.m. but power was restored by 1:23 a.m., according to Ritze.

Street lights on Woodward, from Lincoln to Oak, were all cut out and a traffic light at Lincoln and Southfield was without power.

Ritze said all service was restored as soon as possible.

Flood Test Shows Lots Can Be Sold

There'll be a rezoning hearing Oct. 11 on two city lots prior to their sale.

The hearing date was set Tuesday night as city commissioners agreed a two-year test had shown the lots were not needed for additional flood plain along the Rouge.

The lots are on the east side of Lakeland, north and south of the river.

Now zoned to public use, the parcels would be changed to R-1 residential.

Present State's Assets To Possible Investors

Michigan's strategic location in the market center of a continent, its position on the St. Lawrence Seaway, livability, education, transportation facilities, skilled labor force, its unmatched fresh water supply and other economic assets are highlighted in a new summary of Michigan's advantages for industry.

The pamphlet, just published by the Michigan Economic Development department as a plant location service to industry, will be sent this month to manufacturers, bankers, industrial realtors and industrial development agents in all states and many foreign countries. Number one of a series of industry survey bulletins on Michigan's positive assets, the four-page publication lists latest statistics about the state and region, geographical data and other industrial climate factors influencing the state in the world.

The five Great Lakes states (Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and Wisconsin) have only eight percent of the land area of the United States," the paper says. However, one-third of the nation's manufacturing production. Of all U.S. regions, these five states make up the country's largest market area for both consumer goods and industrial products and materials.
