

Blast Quiz Continues At Kingsley

Bloomfield Hills police are still seeking to determine a motive for the dynamite bombing that slightly damaged the Kingsley Inn restaurant last Wednesday night as patrons dined.

Robert Stadler, Bloomfield Hills public safety director, said "we are still working on the case and have asked the state police to assist our department with the lab work."

All that was found of the bomb, believed to be homemade, was an eight inch portion of the fuse which set off several sticks of dynamite.

"THE DAMAGE to the restaurant was restricted to a rear boiler room where a four foot hole was torn in the brick and concrete wall. Owner Petr Takis, 990 Burnham, Bloomfield Hills, had previously told police that he had twice received anonymous telephone calls demanding money.

Both calls had been from a man who said, "if you don't pay, I'll get you." The calls have given the police little to work with however, since they were made some time before the actual explosion took place.

Stadler has not ruled out the possible extortion motive, but added, "we are also investigating some other areas, such as any personal enemies Takis may have or other trouble."

banking services which would be beneficial to the community," he stressed.

ACCORDING TO Harlan, the new bank "will seek to give personal service, and is itself directly into the business needs of the community. There's room for two banking services in the Birmingham area."

Saturday banking hours are contemplated, he added.

"The bank's directors and investors," he said, "will be drawn heavily from this area. Names of the most of whom will be local residents—will be announced following the bank's incorporation, he indicated.

HE SAID WHEN the application is approved, stock in the new bank will be offered the public at $20 per share.

"We hope most of it will be subscribed to by local people," Harlan said.

White will be made the new bank's chief executive officer. His banking experience spans more than 25 years. In 1946, he was one of the organizers of the Peoples State Bank of Hazel Park. He was named its cashier and a director, and later was promoted to vice president.

WHEN THE City Bank was formed in 1949, he became its cashier. Later he also became vice president.

Harlan lives at 3555 N. Adams, Patterson at 6155 E. Surry, and White at 7355 Parkstone, all in Bloomfield township. Hill at 803 Glengray circle, Bloomfield Village, and Parsons of 236 Sufferd, Birmingham.

In addition to their many other community interests, Harlan, Hill and Patterson all are prominent and active in United Fund and Detroit Boy Scout council activities.

HARLAN ALSO is a trustee of Michigan State University. Birmingham has been served by three branches of the Detroit Bank & Trust Co. since September 1950. This bank was formed by the merger of the Birmingham National Bank with the Detroit Bank, which in turn merged with the Detroit Wabcock Bank & Trust Co. As the former Wabcock State Bank, the latter had operated a branch here. The Birmingham National had two Birmingham branches.

Detroit Bank & Trust is open until 6 p.m. Fridays, closed on Saturdays.

an obligation follows every privilege," she pointed out.

"This has to be a case of persistent education. Patrons Shain, who set up the facility and directed the building of the present house in 1930, had practical solutions to the problem of education and fund-raising.

"There should be loads of advertising—all year long. There should be a committee whose members are willing to take charge of the advertising and promotion and to spend money on it," Mrs. Shain said.

"There should also be a continuation committee," she added. "I used to go back to places—particularly new businesses—as much as 10 times, to remind them of their obligations to the community," she recalled.

"But people are so beleaguered with requests for contributions that the edge is dulled—and they cannot feel this sense of obligation."

No matter how it's done, the signs seem to indicate that it must be, or the ad might be right.
