Living

IN LINE WITH the theme of the Congress — "The Pursuit of Quality" — the women indicated they were well aware of its importance and demanded it in exposed as well as hidden construction areas.

Their favorite company meat, as voiced by this congress, is steak. Steaks and casseroles got the vote for family meals. Hamburgers topped the list. They find their best meat buys at the super markets after consulting week day ads and food columns in the papers. The delegates went all-out for outdoor cooking because my husband does the work and "because it doesn't splash up the oven."

Mrs. Hierta said the women still collect savings stamps, but would be willing to give them up for lower prices.

ON COSMETICS, the gals indicated they like their lipstick creamy. They're leery of heavy eye makeup and they don't like the "sticky appearance" of some of the models in current beauty ads. Some pointed out they would "rather not look younger than the age of my children justifies."

Mrs. Hierta, whose husband, Hans, is a member of the Chrysler engineering staff, reported that the delegates felt that padded dashboards and safety belts should be included as standard equipment on new cars. She said the group liked the idea of a compact car as a second car. Mrs. Hierta was sponsored as a conference delegate by the custom builders Patterson-Sharkey, Inc.
