Gets Its Books Back; Library Says 'Thanks'

To The Editor:
Recently Baldwin public library witnessed a vivid demonstration of the type of teamwork so typical of our community. We felt perhaps your readers might like to hear about it.
To thank the many boys and girls who so generously "stored" Don Martin offered his services to our stories during the building of the new wing of the library, we decided to entertain them at a party; but when our "guest list" grew to exceed one thousand, we realized the need for requesting outside help with that party.
A number of Girl scouts and mothers agreed to act as party hostesses.
Don Martin offered his services to direct party games.
A number of Girl scouts and mothers agreed to act as party hostesses.

FINALLY, The Birmingham Eccentric came through with its usual job of promotion, publicizing the parties and the importance of returning juvenile SOS books promptly in order to secure party tickets.
To all who so willingly helped the boys and girls such a happy afternoon, Mrs. Burch, boys' librarian, Mrs. Burch, girls' librarian, Miss Jeanne Lloyd, director of the library, and I would like to say "thank you very much".

Employees Support Tigers

Raymond T. Perring, 545 Yarboro, Beverly Hills, left, president of The Detroit Bank & Trust company, and Kenyon Brown of Los Angeles, television executive and vice president of the Detroit Baseball company, are shown examining a volume containing the signatures of more than 2,000 employees of the bank in its 58 offices. Collectively, the employees extended their wishes for success to the Detroit Tigers in the balance of the 1960 American League season. The book was presented to Tiger management at a luncheon given by the bank in honor of Brown.

Healthy Lawn Needs Care

Growing a lovely lawn takes lots of care and many hours of hard work. You don't have to be an expert, but do follow sound establishment and maintenance practices.
First, be sure to test your soil to discover if soil is acid and its degree of acidity. (Inexpensive testing kits are available.) The type of soil determines how much lime to apply.
To sandy or gravelly soil, add peat, well-rotted manure, or well decomposed sawdust. To clay soil, add sand, peat, vermiculite, or scoria.
JUST BEFORE planting, apply and rake in a complete, inorganic fertilizer (one containing nitrogen, phosphorus, and potash) at a rate that will provide two pounds of actual nitrogen per 1,000 square feet.
The first step in planting is to select high quality seeds of grasses that are adapted to your soil and climate.
AFTER SOWING, the seed should be covered lightly by hand raking from 1/4 to 1/2 inch deep in the case of large seeds, and from 1/8 to 1/4 inch deep, when small seeds are used.
Mulching with a light covering of weed-free straw or hay or with open-meshed sacking cloth will prevent the seed from washing away during watering or rain.
If the gardener thinks his job is finished when the seed is in, well, he's wrong.
New seedlings must be kept moist until well established.
Once seeds have begun to germinate they must not dry out or they will die. (Avoid excessive moisture, however.)
EARLY SPRING and fall are the times to fertilize bluegrass, fescue, and other cool-season grasses (those making their maximum growth in spring and fall). Do not apply fertilizers—particularly inorganic—when the grass leaves are wet.
