THE BILLBOARD

BLOOMFIELD
HILLS
HIGH

Sue Sass (left) and Deanna Laughlin receive Traub scholarships from Bloomfield Hills Supt. of Schools Eugene Johnson (back to camera). Miss Sass received her scholarship in art, Miss Laughlin in music. The scholarships will enable the girls to study in Europe this summer.

Put Arts in Their Work

It is always reassuring and a real pleasure to report the recognition of talent and achievement in the arts.

Bloomfield Hills students are fortunate to have available a scholarship program which rewards outstanding students in art and music, the C. J. Traub Award. Presented annually since 1956, the recipients receive a summer trip to Europe.

This Meeting Is Aimed at The Future

By THE PRESS CLUB

Barnum ninth-grade Parent Teachers association is to meet tonight, March 25 at 8 in the Barnum High.

Mrs. Carol Darling, dean of students at Seaborn high school, will speak on "Planning for High School."

Mr. Malcolm R. Lovell, a trustee on the Birmingham board of education will be on hand to explain the midrange issue to be voted upon in the coming school election.

Today is a big day for the students in more ways than one—report cards. Tomorrow they can recuperate as there will be no school because of the Michigan education association conference.

Plans are under way for the annual "cheerleaders' dance" May 6, but the details are being kept a dark secret.

Mrs. Fay Geyman's seventh-grade art classes have an unusual display on their bulletin board.

Don't miss the interesting paper sculpture which will eventually be worked into "coffee can art," painted black to resemble wrought iron.

Mrs. Greta Kinnell's two ninth-grade Latin classes and her Spanish class saw the spectacular "Hon-Har" this week. The one-hundred-odd students and teachers left school by bus for the United Artists theater in Detroit after lunch and returned home at 6:30.

The portrayal of Roman times was particularly interesting to these students.

This week's high bowlers among the boys were Roger Ulrich and Don Smith. Harold Johnson and Nancy Schaefer led the girls. Bar-

At a special assembly before the entire student body, Eugene L. Johnson, president of the school board, presented the art award to Sue Sass, the music award to Deanna Laughlin. Both have long been recognized publicly and privately for superior work.

Alternates, chosen in the event that either winner is unable to go to Europe, were Amy Miller in Art, and Judy Ewald in music, both also known for excellent achievement. It is this type of achievement which builds and insures the quality and reputation of the school.

Sincere thanks and appreciation are due these four people and the other applicants, whose work is a tribute to expressive thought. Its recognition is vital.

Following closely the Traub award were report cards, which have a more general and far reaching scope. The usual long faces and frowns of recent were displaced by the inevitable loss of memory which blasts out a bad experience. "C'est la guerre!"

Here and there another achiever who deserves special mention is Dave McKee, who recently scored 900 (a perfect paper) on his college board examination, math section.

The score is so unusual that it deserves a special credit. Cheers and hopes for more like it.

The junior class participated in the National Merit Scholarship testing program last Saturday at the high school. Those scores should be rolling in soon, and we hope to see many finalists among them.

The junior class is also preparing its annual class play. This year's selection, directed by Mr. Wooster, head of the speech department, is "The Little Boy Laughed," the story of a college girl who creates chaos by psychoanalyzing all her friends.

This promising play, with its promising cast, promises to be enjoyable when presented April 1 and 2. Further details will appear here soon.

num juniors led the eighteen teams with a record of 12 games won. Don Smith, Harold Johnson and The Spartans and the Spartans have won 10 and 9 games, respectively.

Fastest on the Track

Weighing-in are Cub Scout pack B-8's two champion race-car owners. Cubmaster Neill Dillon watches as winner Frank McLaughlin (rear) and runner-up Mark Simpson re-check the weight of the cars that took the Pinewood derby last week at Adams school.
