Bridge Parties to Benefit Therapy Program at Hospital

Tuesday at 8 p. m., Mrs. Rodkey Craighead of 412 S. Adams, will launch the first in a series of bridge parties that will aid and give support to the Spiritual Therapy program at the Pontiac State hospital for the mentally ill.

The second in the series will be April 27 by Mrs. Charles Leinenkugel and Mrs. D. J. Watson Jr., whose a third will be held sometime in May by Mrs. R. E. Gish. Proceeds from these bridge parties will provide necessary materials for the expanding and related arts and crafts work.

THE NEW therapy was introduced at the Pontiac State hospital, by Mrs. Scott Purvis almost five years ago through the use of Biblical dolls.

Because of the popularity and therapeutic value of the class, Mrs. Purvis was asked in October to take her work into Kinney cottage with the hope that the many women housed there might be motivated into activity. The new program called "Wake Up and Live" was a challenge that has resulted in a contagious enthusiasm throughout the building.

THE SPIRITUAL lesson provides the motivating force that promotes activity in the various other therapies serving the physical, social, artistic and cultural side of life, the total serving the whole person.
