Hint to Boat Owners On Simple Shelter

One of the nation's biggest family recreations is—boating. It is estimated that 37,000,000 people in about seven and a half million pleasure craft are enjoying the waterways.

A large proportion of the country's recreational fleet is transported on trailers. Easily pulled behind the family car, these boat trailers help broaden the range of waters that the "skipper and crew" can enjoy.

THE TRAILERS also provide a convenient and inexpensive way to store the boat at home when it is not in use.

An important accessory for the trailer boat between trips, is a shelter for protection from the elements.

THE MAKERS of Scott outboard motors suggest a simple building project for a boat shelter—easily within the abilities of most do-it-yourselfers.

It will help to keep the craft looking newer, the motor running better.

IF YOURS is a one-car family with a two-car garage or carport, your problem is simple...

The unused car space is just right for any trailer boat up to about 22 feet in length.

Besides giving the boat complete protection, it also provides storage space for needed boating gear and offers a good place to work on the boat.

WHEN GARAGE space is not available, Scott experts suggest construction of a simple "boatport" or shelter.

Consisting of roof and suitable supports, the boat shelter can be made free standing, supported all around by 2x4's or 4x4's.

IT MAY OR may not have side walls of wood or canvas. Or, build it as a lean-to, adjacent to a wall of a house or a garage.

The size of the "port", should encompass the full length of the boat and trailer; a width of nine feet should be ample for most boats.

THE ROOF should have enough pitch to assure good run-off of snow and heavy rains. Corrugated aluminum, steel, fiberglass sheets or corrugated panels are all good shelter materials.

It may also be made of wood covered by roofing paper or composition shingles.

A FAVORED type of lean-to construction features a roof that is hinged to the wall, and outside supports are either hinged or removable.

The whole structure can swing down flat against the wall when not in use.

SCOTT EXPERTS point out that although modern metal and fiberglass craft stand up well with canvas or tarpaulin coverings, a more substantial shelter gives added protection—assuring a "like-new boat" for a much longer time.

Your Home May Need A Spring Tonic, Too!

In the "good" old days, everybody took a spring tonic after the hard winter. Although tranquilizers have taken the place of the old standby, people still are taking those spring tonics. Homes, too, get tired after a hard winter and need overhauling. The perfect Spring Tonic for your home is a visit to the professional consultants at Birmingham Paint, Wallpaper and Glass. They will analyze your problem and advise you the best way to create a new look for your winter-weary home.

Let the experts at Birmingham Paint, Glass and Wallpaper work with you to make your home the showplace you've always wanted it to be.
