

BIRMINGHAM, MICHIGAN

Thursday, May 26, 1960

None of us desires to inherit difficult problems; heavy burdens, be they economic or otherwise, also are not welcomed by us of this earth. Yet many are the problems and the burdens that often afflict people . . . and, somehow, most of them manage to come through, stronger than ever. Just as exercise, hard work, develops physical muscles, so do problems, burdens, develop self-reliance.
