

9 City Officials Hear Latest Plan For Sewage

Representatives from nine South Oakland cities met in Royal Oak last week to hear an engineering report that declared a sewage treatment plant would be feasible for South Oakland county.

Drain Commissioner Daniel W. Barry, suggested that the treatment plant could substitute for the Desquindre sanitary interceptor.

ACCORDING TO Birmingham City Manager L. R. Gare, the meeting topic was a complete surprise. The report, given by Johnson and Anderson, Pontiac, was asked for in August by Barry. It was to have been mailed to officials, Gare said, and not just handed out at a surprise meeting.

THE SEWAGE TREATMENT plant to handle 50 million gallons a day would cost $15 million to build and $400,000 a year to operate. It would take a year to design and two years to build. The plant would treat sewage and storm water from South Oakland cities and dump the treated water into the Red Run drain which leads into Lake St. Clair.

And To What Avail?

It's all over now, but Monday morning campaign fever still ran high as Republicans gathered at county headquarters in Birmingham to form this caravan for Vice President Nixon's last Michigan visit. The motorcade convened at headquarters, 351 N. Woodward, then traveled to Detroit for Nixon's address before a four-hour television appearance in Southfield.

PEOPLE'S COLUMN

Intellect, Freedom Are Also Important

To the Editor:

The leading men of affairs in our nation urge us to vote into office our choice in platforms and national leaders. Personally, I found this choice very difficult to make due to the fact that both the platforms selected by our two main political parties merited close scrutiny and consideration; as did the nominated men. The welfare of the nation and of the citizen is at stake. The four men nominated for the highest public office that this nation has to offer are men of wide experience in matters of government. Both sets of president and vice president constitute men of value in world-size matters, and one of them caused me to think long and hard upon the extremely important matter constituted by the choices we make in concepts of mankind and resultant choices of motivating ideas.

THESE ARE the choices which, so obviously in our time, can cause either human WEAL or WOE. As citizen in this democracy, I am obligated to weigh in the intellect not only the man nominated for office, nor only the nation's welfare, but more the FACT that just by being a citizen in our nation one stands equally dedicated with the courageous forerunners who chose to make the effort to find the way to establish the democratic way of life on earth. Weighing this FACT brings to light also the fact that the citizen long and hard upon the extremely inherits the priceless longview meaning of freedom and human unity.

IN THE FINAL analysis DEMOCRACY means granting people the freedom to individually exercise the individual intellect. Such freedom requires granting sanctuary within the national borders to each and every choice made in concepts of mankind and consequent motivating ideas, as made by the citizenry.

Due to modern methods of communication in our time not only our nation but the entire world of human affairs is exposed to the hybrid influence comprised of all existent concepts of mankind and resultant motivating ideas. To guide us of this nation our institutions established government of the people, by the people and for people. In our nations all concepts of mankind and ensuing choices of motivating ideas find life or death in this mill, here in our Nation.

BY THE STRIDES taken in material progress in our nation the fact is made very evident that the human entity in intellect can and does find the more abundant levels of life; and also the fact greatly is evident that no level of more abundant life has a chance to endure in our machine-washable, no-iron wool fabrics already have been produced in laboratories. She notes that researchers have optimistic about the future of these wash and wear fabrics. Wool fibers do not naturally muss or pill as easily as cotton or man-made fibers, but they do have a tendency to felt or abrade when washed with agitation and steam. Researchers have tested various chemicals and resins to stabilize the fiber. They found some treatments would control shrinkage, but would leave unwanted side effects, such as yellowing, change in hand or fiber damage. Two promising treatments for wool have been developed abroad—one in Australia and one in Israel. Researchers with the Wool Bureau in the United States believe minimum care woolen fabrics can be obtained through improved yarn constructions and better yarns, perhaps in combination with some slight chemical modification.

THEREFORE, BY observation gradually we learn that this verse-initiated project of man sojourning earth in the interests of the pursuit of truth definitely is not a cradle-to-grave incident but most indubitably constitutes the beginning of non-truth reality.

Although it is a fully exposed fact that granting people the freedom to individually exercise the individual intellect has exposed all people universally to the hybrid influence comprised of all kinds of concepts of mankind and ensuing choices of motivating ideas; it also is true and evident that our nation is not required to hold other nations as hostage, or forced to debase another people to beastially underdeveloped human entities in intellect.

THE MEN nominated in our nation to take part in world-size human affairs by outsiders can be accused of being chiefly and primarily interested in material progress; but as citizens they stand with me, equally dedicated with the fathers of our nation to grant people the freedom to individually exercise the individual intellect in this universe-initiated project of man sojourning earth in the interests of the pursuit of truth. . . and as of now, no human entity in intellect has found freedom before having been set free from intellectualizing influences and ignorance. Histories prove that the right man for the job always is found in this universe-initiated project of mankind sojourning earth. . . when it comes to setting a thief to catch a thief. . . the confidence that our all-pervading universe depicts truth. Were not the forefathers of our nation long years ago thinking thoughts about the freedom to individually exercise the individual intellect which today is mine?

Detroit Times Sale Causes Area Problems

Excitement over the folding of the 60-year-old Detroit Times is not an exclusive for downtown Detroit. Birmingham residents, readers and youngsters are in the midst of it.

When the Times ceased publication Monday after selling out to the Detroit News, instead of two prominent Birmingham area men. One is Warren S. Booth, publisher of the News, who lives at 420 Martell drive, Bloomfield Hills.

The second is Phil F. DeBeaubien, 1472 N. Cranbrook road, Bloomfield Village. He is the former publisher of the Times.

After these two top officials completed details of the sale, Birmingham residents were left with a decision—will it be the Free Press or the News Times, or both?

AND THE YOUNGSTERS, too—the boys with routes in the area—faced a problem. Some who had been delivering the Times were told by circulation officials that they should affiliate with the Free Press, instead of the News. Many Times district managers were signed up by the Free Press following the sale announcement.

The two sons of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Goode, Jr., 604 Hanna, Birmingham, are typical of area carriers brought in the confusion of "who gets what?" They were told to get the papers on the porch for the next few days and don't try to collect.

The intensified circulation war that has resulted has been made obvious by the rush to door steps with subscription blanks.

Publisher de Beaubien could not be reached for comment. He is reported vacationing in N. Carolina.

BOOTH WAS president of Booth Newspapers Inc. for many years. He is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George G. Booth, founders of Cranbrook foundation.

George Booth was the long-time president of the Evening News association, owner of the Detroit News.
