BITS OF BIRMINGHAM

"Greater love hath no man..." You've heard this, of course, but did you ever hear of the unbounded dimensions of love and self-sacrifice that the wife of a humble political candidate would scribe... like, for example, Mrs. James Kellis, whose Jim is a Democratic candidate for Congress from this district? Jim's campaign is impoverished for lack of financial support, he admits, and so do his loyal followers. The other day, though, his wife, Sophie, was driving down south Woodward, below 13-Mile, and saw a 30 x 10 foot billboard on which she decided she'd like to see her spouse's picture and message. She found it would cost $350 more than she could muster. Contact with the board's owner revealed (after she told him of Jim's campaign qualifications) that she could have the board and a message put on it for $250. What did she do but take some birthday money her mother had sent her, plus some household funds she had frugally saved up, and used it to have Jim's story placed on that billboard — and all of this done without Jim's knowledge... for she wants him to be joyfully surprised when he sees it while driving down Woodward. Yes, "Greater love hath no woman..."

This Wanderer overheard the following suggestion, offered to a local barberhop by one of its customers: "Why don't you train a parrot to greet every customer when he enters your shop? 'Twould save you barbers the bother, and also be a great novelty. The parrot could say: 'Hi, c'mon in and take a seat. How's Trix? Which barber do you want to trim you? Nice day, eh? Wanna talk politics, baseball, or outdoor cookin'?' Turning to one of the talkative barbers, the parrot could shout: "Shutup! Let the customers have the floor!" At this writing, the idea hasn't taken... though the barber revealed some interest in it.

Mrs. Charles G. Lifka, former resident of Birmingham called The Birmingham Eccentric to thank the Birmingham-Bloomfield Zonta club women for adding the hurricane disaster area in Marathon, Fla. Mrs. Lifka owns a home there. It was completely gutted. The Zonta women, she said, assisted in a drive that sent more than 1,000 pounds of clothing to the stricken area.

This Wanderer has a pet theory that a teen-age driver is a much better risk after he or she finds out "it can happen to me." Nevertheless, the dual but minor mishaps that happened recently to one 17-year-old miss does smack a little of "rubbing salt."

On her way to a Seaholm high field day practice session, she backed her mom's car into the fender of a parked auto—knocking out the left tail light. After the meeting, she returned to the parking lot to find a note on the windshield.

"Sorry. We backed into your car and knocked out your left front headlight."
