2 CIGARETTE STOCKS FOR POSSIBLE GAINS

The prices of the five major cigarette stocks, with one exception, are now considerably higher than at the close of 1959. Our new report on the cigarette industry states that while these higher prices are in keeping with present-day values, they also reflect two other important factors: 1) recognition that cigarette consumption is growing steadily, and 2) that because of population trends future growth is likely to accelerate. We tabulate the sales and earnings of the five leading companies in 1959-1960 and compare their profit margins. Also discussed are the relative industry positions of each company and the gains and losses of specific cigarette brands. Two issues are selected for current purchase.
