When the ding dong gong of the school bell rings out in just a short time from now, it will mark the use of "pencils, books, teachers and homework" in the vocabulary of local youngsters.

It will mark smoother days for mom and clothing bills for dad. It means a few more pounds on the dog—no kids to activate his day.

It means 20 questions times infinity for teachers and parents whose charges never get enough answers.

The Birmingham Eccentric's back-to-school special edition is designed to tell these 31,000 area students what's on the agenda for the fall. Parents and teachers too will find the contents of this tabloid section full of interesting information, feature stories, photographs and advertisements geared to young scholars.
