A while back Chatterbox suggested the possibility of intra-area prep athletic competition.

While our bodies and minds are recouperating from the heetic Christmas rush, and preparing for the on-coming New Year, this may be an appropriate time to sit back and digest a few problems.

What is Seaholm doing in the Eastern Michigan League? Or to rephrase: Why are they in the EML?

According to long-time Birmingham Athletic Director Frank Whitney, who has held his present position since 1946, the year after Birmingham Joined the EML, Seaholm has won but one football and one baskethal championship in these first 16 years.

At least, that's what he recalls without going through an unending backlog of league statistics.

At least, that's what he recalls without going through an unending backlog of league statistics of times but gold and tennis squads have held their own over the years.

Only soorts in which the Maples have excelled are those which require a greater amount of individual effort: swimming, track and cross-country.

SPORTS BIOOMING IN HILLS
Bloomfield Hills would be a natural for such a league.
They've come up with fine athletic squads in all sports—save one, swimming. The proposition brought before the voters regarding a pool for the high school was drowned in apathy.

Almost all the Birmingham area schools travel right through Oak Park on their way to some place or another. And for a number of years, Hills has scheduled Oak Park as its opening opponent in basketball and football.

Other schools which may be interested in the forming of a new league may include Thurston and North Farmington.

Other schools when him, of a new league may include Thurston and North Farmington.

Athletic directors: Take a walk around the block, Pull the collar of your overcoat up around your ears and lower the tip of your hat to keep the wind from forming icicles on your forehead. Then think.

What are the possibilities? What advantages would a new league hold for your school? Would the school administrators be happy? The students?

Now's the time for all good athletic directors to come to the aid of their program, etc.

Happy New Year!
