Scholarship Group Organized at MSUO

A committee of citizens has been organized in Mount Clemens to help keep a promise made to high school students by the chancellor of Michigan State University Oakland.

The group is the MSUO Foundation Macomb, County Scholarship Committee, headed by Mrs. Philip T. Mulligan of Mount Clemens.

D. B. Varner, MSUO chancellor, promised high school students that no one in the graduating class' upper quarter would be denied the opportunity to attend MSUO because of lack of funds.

A committee headed by Mrs. Ralph Norvell of Pontiac already has raised $40,000 in scholarship gift money and has established a scholarship trust fund with an initial endowment of more than $22,000.

Many other organizations, civic and private, and private individuals have contributed scholarship funds. These gifts include the four-year Charles Evans Hughes Scholarship established by Mrs. William T. Gossett, 420 Goodhue, Bloomfield Hills, in honor of her late father, Chief Justice of the United States.

These funds have made it possible for many deserving students who lacked funds to attend MSUO.

The next meeting of the committee will be Feb. 28 at the university. Chancellor Varner will address the group.

Col. McPartlin Leads Exercise Over Alaska

Flight commander of a huge C-119 aircraft taking part in Operation Willow Freeze is Col. James H. McPartlin, 1022 Top View, Bloomfield Township.

The operation, a two-week exercise, consists of the largest all Reserve Troop Carrier Task Force ever to participate in a joint Army-Air Force exercise over the Alaskan Frontier.

Col. McPartlin is commander of the 403rd Troop Carrier Wing at Selfridge Air Force Base.

A COMBAT VETERAN of World War II, McPartlin is engaged in the flying end of this maneuver to further his "combat readiness" status as a command pilot in the Reserves.

Operating from Elmendorf AFB, Alaska, he will be part of the 10 squadrons from four of the nation's troop carrier wings making 44 sorties to drop hundreds of paratroopers from the famed 82nd Airborne Division, along with numerous heavy equipment drops and air landing sorties.

Auditions Open To Local, Area Young Artists

Mrs. Vernon L. Venman, 499 N. Eton, Birmingham, is in charge of applications for the National Federation of Music Clubs young artists auditions for 1961.

These auditions are open to local residents, explained Mrs. Phillip R. Flanders, 4688 Brafferton, Bloomfield Hills, who is in charge of local publicity.

Awards of $1,000 will be made in five classifications: male voice, female voice, piano, violin and chamber music.

Other prizes are available.

PIANO AND VIOLIN entrants must be 20 to 25 years old; voice entrants, 23 to 28; and members of chamber music groups, 20 to 35.

Deadline to enter is Feb. 15.

Awards for students between the ages of 16 and 25 range from $200 to four-year scholarships. Mrs. Ezra Lipkin, 17599 Greenlawn, Detroit, is receiving applications. Deadline is Feb. 15.

Birmingham Musicale is a member of the federation.

$6,000 Appropriated For Rescue Truck

Birmingham city commissioners Monday night appropriated $6,000 for purchase of a heavy-duty rescue truck.

Matching funds of $6,000 are expected from the Federal Government to pay for the civil defense-type vehicle, which will be manned and operated by the fire department.

AS ASSISTANT City Manager R. S. Kenning explained, the truck would be used solely for rescue purposes in event of man-made or natural disaster. It would have a crew of 21, with a fire department captain in charge.

It would be housed at the Chesterfield station.

Local Writer Believes In Full School Year

By RUTH VOGT
Special Writer

Why must our expensively-built school buildings be vacant for three months of each year?

Why do our children, who live in modern homes where chores must be literally "dug up" for them to perform, why do we, (without at least asking why) take for granted that it is wise to keep our institutions closed for 10 weeks of each year?

Is it because we have studied everything Admiral Rickover has said over and over again? Is it because he, with many other authorities, has insisted that we are not as yet educating our children in the manner they should be educated?

"SO MUCH that passes for 'education' is merely rote material," he has declared, "we need thought beyond this if we are to keep ahead, not to speak of keeping 'up' with other countries."

And yet, because the 'status quo" is in favor of the method in vogue, we as parents haven't given it too much deep thought? Of course we have.

It's because, perhaps, we don't know how to express our dissatisfaction with what is in style. As of now, the 'long vacation' is accepted, but as Admiral Ricokver wondered, we are wondering too.

IN ONE article, he cited how many European schools held their doors open six days a week. He listed the number of hours, not to speak of the kind of hard courses, they took. As against ours, they looked quite far ahead.

Our schools were, in the beginning, set up in accordance with the farming program then prevelant. Parents needed extra hands to help with the harvesting of crops; that's why a good three months were given.

Now, instead of lending a hand with bringing in the corn, wheat and hay (which modern machinery does so nicely), our children are sent off to camp, to the relatives or to recreation fields in order to keep them busy the whole summer long.

THIS IS done in an era when there's so much to learn, in a period when the ordinary school day is not filled during the winter months with any really tough and tedious courses.

Authorities plead with us, via every magazine picked up, to 'be aware of how the world is moving so fast this past two decades.'

They tell us that if we wish to improve, not to speak of just keeping up, we must concentrate more on what our next generation is going to be. Can we afford to drive past our empty school buildings all summer long and be complacent because they are gathering a nice film of dust, to be removed only when autumn comes?

WE ARE not existing in the time of the horse cutting hay in our fields; we are competing with jets, (and they will soon be out of style) and missiles and journeys to outer spaces.

We do need our schools, but not just a part of the year. Remember, we do have air conditioning.

Education? We haven't touched it as yet.
