"Company Keeping" doesn't always to forsake an old love for a new one.

Sometimes investors have a tendency to keep on "going steady" with certain securities, merely because they have held them a long time. This "Company Keeping may or may not be wise, depending upon the type of stock and how it fits into the investor's picture. There are instances when it may be better

One of the services our clients appreciate most is our analysis of portfolios in terms of individual requirements. In some cases we may recommend that stocks continue to be held indefinitely. In others we may suggest that certain holdings be replaced with securities that seem more desirable for providing either the future security or present income that is If you have been "Company Keeping" for a long time, why not stop in at either of our offices and let us review your portfolio.
