Bel Canto Trio To Appear Here

The Bel Canto Trio, which will appear at Cranbrook House Tuesday at 8:30 under the auspices of the Cranbrook Music Guild, is composed of three highly gifted young American artists, each of whom has achieved distinction as a solo artist but whose talents blend to perfection in the art of ensemble singing.

Soprano Rosalie Maresca, tenor James Wainner, bass-baritone Gene Boucher combine their exceptional voices and charming personalities to make up this outstanding trio, now in its second successful season.

It is chosen from the familiar repertory of opera, oratorio, operetta, art songs and music from contemporary theater. Solos and duets are featured, but the highlight of the evening comes with the trios in which the artists demonstrate their mastery of ensemble singing in the great Bel Canto tradition.

Birmingham-Bloomfield Hills Society Nates

Been waiting breathlessly for the spring couture word from Paris? The girls in the back room have sent as a flash on what Birmingham-Bloomfield fashion leaders will be wearing this coming season with flowered chiffon, like Abu Ben Abdem, leading all the rest.

Laruche is using Gauguin colors but those of you with real style wiles are naturally supposed to think pink! (Gardin has scored a coup with a reverse sou'wester sounds as if they're getting a little desperate over there).

Larvin has brought back the boal! which means that we can have as much fun as Ben Lillie does with her pearls. We're told that any fabric can be used for our boas as long as it's either ruffled or ruffled. THAT'S a disappointment. I was hoping for a return to egret feathers—molting season would have been such fun.

Gres has seam slashed coats which could certainly be a do-it-yourself project for any of us handy with a scissors. The house of Dior has been waging a crafty war against pointed toes and the tide is turning in favor of shoes with the squared off or "infanta" look (Easter Brown to me). We'll have to admit that bit of news means happier feet.

But the thing that pleases me most is the revelation that the most important unit in our wardrobe is to be, and I quote, "a little rag of a dress." Hooray! We'll make it through another year.

Plenty of Pros
Most of the Otsego skiers last weekend deserted the club to make the short trip to Boyne Mountain where the first Midwest pro race was held (most cheering note we've had about our state in weeks).

Snow bunnies and ski sharks alike were able to watch some of the world's most famous skiers including Christian Pravda, Toni Spis, Andrew Molterer, Stein Erickson and Tyrone Berge. Even if they couldn't ski these tanned and handsome young men would be a delight to watch. Erickson and Molterer placed first and second in the ski race, that is!
