

Available to man are many aids for his comfort, security, his happiness . . . and the way to obtain them, of course, is through personal effort. Summing it all up, the sages and the philosophers of every era inform us that the development and use of one's mental and spiritual potentials is necessary for man to progress. Actually, the range of man's progress is limited only by the limits he places upon himself.

Birthday Greetings to All

Birthday anniversaries came smartly into focus at the DAC Friday evening when the club opened the final floor show of the season. Mr. and Mrs. Raymond T. Perring of Yarbora Road, Bloomfield Hills, chose the first night of the seven-evening event to entertain. Mr. Perring is president of the DAC and the couple's guests were directors of the club and their wives. But May 12 also was Mrs. Perring's birthday and there was a beautiful birthday cake to mark the occasion. The Perrings greeted their guests in a private dining room, where cocktails were served, before the group went into the main room.

In the party from the Birmingham-Bloomfield area were the Jarvis Webbs, Norman Fredericks and the Edwin O. Georges. Others were the Frank Kenneses, Lee Hills, William Ulrichs and Truman Barriers.

MRS. M. M. Burgess of Country Club Lane, Bloomfield Hills, and Mrs. Harry W. Anderson of Ann Arbor were collaborating hostesses at a dinner party at the opener. The dinner honored Mrs. Lawrence Fisher, George Walker and Mrs. Anderson on this trio's month-of-May birthdays. Besides Mr. Fisher and Mr. Walker, guests were the George T. Trumbulls, the Lloyd H. Diehls, James Goodmans, George Russells, L. L. Coberts, Frederick Richardsons and the James Roches.

At another table Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bihler of Franklin entertained the John Wilts of Grosse Pointe, the W. M. Daleys of Dearborn and the Harry Days of Beverly Hills, who were just back from a stay at Pinehurst.

ON SATURDAY, the Carl Kindls of Pembroke Drive, entertained a party of 30 friends. At a cocktail hour first in the private dining room and later at a long table in the main room, their guests included the Robert Critchfields, Kenneth Manuels, Felix Bruners, Arthur Jordans, Dr. and Mrs. Owen Hendren, the Alan Looftourrows, William Blingames, Russell Norris, James Pedders and the Dale Douglases.

Junior Group to Stage 'Four Seasons Mart'

To initiate a festive summer, members of the Junior Group of Goodwill Industries will stage a "Four Seasons Mart" on June 1, from 11 a.m. 'til 5 p.m., on the adjoining grounds of the George T. Trumbull home, Bloomfield Hills.

This project is to benefit the handicapped workers at the Goodwill Industries and will be open to the public. The special atmosphere of this affair is inspired by the beautiful setting of trees in a grove and the combining decorations which will carry out the motif of the four seasons.

THERE WILL BE four large green and beige striped canopies, each adjoining a tree which will be decorated to capture the feeling of the individual season. Elaborately decorated topiary trees on pedestals will frame the entrance to each booth. Members will be distinguished by headbands trimmed with a seasonal theme.

The spring booth will feature items such as artistic baskets, handbags and lovely arrangements of ivy and greens in unusual containers. Gigantic tulips, daffodils and marbled garden statuary will beautify this area.

will beautify this area.

GARLANDS OF PINK and red roses, in varying shades, and exotic rose trees will entice shoppers into the summer booth. Displayed will be Italian-inspired hand-smoked dresses, bathwear, hats and robes for children. There will also be a garden section, where potted flowering plants may be purchased.

The focal points of the autumn booth will feature the brilliant and vivid colors of fruit and falling leaves in shades of orange, sienna and yellow. Here will be found many distinctive items for home decoration, such as antiquated epergnes, small fruit topiary trees and novelty birdcages.

FAR-SIGHTED shoppers will anticipate the spirit of Christmas in the winter booth, with its tinsel and glittery ornaments. Shown here will be a variety of unique Christmas wreaths, sequin and felt-trimmed Christmas stockings and clever holiday hostess aprons; also ski caps and sweaters, matching place cards and matches for holiday parties.

The many arrangements and shapely details of the Mart are being supervised by Mrs. George T. Trumbull and Mrs. Richard Wagner. Other Birmingham area committee members include Mesdames Richard Allman, E. Hans Scheive, Robert Green, Lloyd Bishop, Bruce King and Donald Borgeson.
