IRMA N. DAVIS

She was also a room mother once again. In the ensuing years she worked on publicity for the PTA, as program chairman and board member. In the latter capacity she is head of the school board legislation committee.

During her service as program chairman, she recalls assisting one evening with some science displays. "I had to be high at a PTA meeting. Collections made by Harlan pupils were being arranged and she has a pungent memory of one of them.

"SOME OF the exhibits were projects done in school—dissecting and things like that. The frogs were really."

The Gages, who met at a youth group meeting in Detroit, have always maintained an interest in young people. They both teach Sunday School classes at the First Methodist Church in Birmingham

During the last two weeks your columnist has been traveling along the east coast wallowing in the splendor of the fall coloring, untouched by wind or rain. While I have been away, I hope that you have been working like Trojans. I feel guilty leaving you with the odds and ends of fall work to accomplish.

At this date have you potted tulips and other bulbs for February pleasure? Let's begin with a lesson on tulips. The other varieties fall into the same technique with slight variations. Select a seven-inch clay pot or larger, cover the bottom with a broken piece of clay pot or one inch of stones.

FILL THE POT half full with rich garden soil. Notice your tulip bulbs, they have a rounded side and a flat side. Make a circle within the flat side of the bulb toward the outside.

Four bulbs would be the correct number to use for a seven-inch pot. Be sure that they Mrs. Burlingame are all of one color and that they will cover the top of the flat side toward the clay wall they will come up uniformly. Place an inch of soil over the top of the bulbs after you have nuzzled them down into the rich soil. The top level of the soil should be midway up on the collar of the pot.

AT THIS TIME water thoroughly and place in the dark—but where they will not freeze. Most people dig a trench in the garden and then cover their lot with leaves and "stuff"—never soil, due to the trouble recovering the pots after the winter weather sets in. You will want to use a large stick to mark the trench. If the excavation is covered with burlap, it is helpful. Within this trench you can place planted pots with small bulbs as well as hyacinths.

LEAVE YOUR "squirrel-like" prizes under cover until there has been at least seven weeks of good cold weather. If you have an old fashioned cold fruit cellar, you might use this location. It is necessary to have cold for a long period of time for the growth of roots and conditioning of the bulb.

UPON LEAVING Birmingham for the east, the first stop was Syracuse, N. Y. Coming in from the airport I was very interested in the manner in which the Carrier Corp. had handled its factory landscaping. There was a high fence around the installation and next to the fence inside the barrier was an imposing line of poplars, perhaps thirty feet high.

So, the observer's eye was directed to the beautiful greenery with the sign of the company above it. The confusion of open factory storage doors and inventory Hills, is stationed in California where he is a radio operator. He is a graduate of Bloomfield Hills High School.

stacked outside was camouflaged. You can't help but say, "It is a nice factory site."

What better public relations would a firm want. Good landscaping designed to the need will definitely add value to factory property and public good will toward a company.

SEVEN HUNDRED plus acres have been developed into the Green Lake State Park near Syracuse. What lessons it would give us in space use for people. It has a golf course, a swimming site and a place for camping. Syracuse University with its beautiful site on a hill developed since 1870 brings back fond memories to many local readers. The campus commands a superb view of the valley from its large acreage. Stately trees have been placed in a measured manner to enhance the architecture.

ON TO CONNECTICUT College for the celebration of its 50th anniversary. Near its ocean site in New London, Conn., you see a solid grouping of grey field stone buildings. The campus reminds this midwesterner of the campus at Indiana University. They have a beautifully designed new activities building known as Crozier-Williams with detail suited to the recreation needs of women students. Dr. Rosemary Park who is the beloved president will be leaving to become president of Barnard College.

Many of the alumnae who returned inquired about our well-known Winise Coffin who left her reputation for humor there since undergraduate days.

Many motorists prepare for winter driving by simply adding antifreeze and rolling up the car windows. However, the Institute for Safer Living believes that further important steps are necessary to insure maximum cold weather driving comfort and safety. Your car should be checked for mechanical performance, including brakes, lights, and windshield wipers.

At this year, one in America and one in Berlin.

You can't blame the boss for being a crank if his employees aren't self-starters.

"See sickness" comes from watching too much television.

SHE AVERAGES three nights a month in PTA activities—normally. With the work she is now doing on the millage proposal she is "using every free moment I can find."

"When I worked on millage last year, my husband worried that I was spending too much time on it but I heard him bragging to some of our friends about what I was doing."

"He's really very patient, though," Mrs. Gage added. She said she hoped to organize her group more effectively this year and is now busy making out cards for each of the millage workers in the district.

"It's hard going when you don't type," she added. "BUT 'HARD GOING' has not stopped her yet. When agreed to do the publicity for the Harlan PTA, I thought afterwards that I must have been out of my mind. But you know, I enjoyed it thoroughly. The millage is important, but afterwards it's important too. Our taxes provide the facilities and the teachers; from then on it's up to the parents to support them and cooperate—for the sake of all the children."
