

Junior League Musicales Sets Spring Concert

Getting started in amateur radio sometimes presents a problem. How do you go about it? It's a good idea, for one thing, to consult other local hams and the way to get to know them is to visit, or even better, to join a local radio club. In this area, the Catalpa Amateur Radio Society is practically at your doorstep.

CARS holds regular meetings at St. James Episcopal Church in Birmingham on the third Monday of each month. The meetings may be attended by non-members as well as members.

The club has members in all age groups, ranging from the junior high school level to members who have been radio amateurs for 40 years. The next meeting of CARS will be April 16.

ANOTHER organization which could be helpful to potential hams is the American Radio Relay League — ARRL — of Hartford, Conn. This is a national organization of radio amateurs founded in the days when a radio message had to be sent through relays, if it had to travel more than a 100 miles.

Membership in the league carries with it a subscription to the monthly magazine, "QST." Within its pages will be found articles about ham activities, new rules and regulations, technical articles directed towards all classes of hams as well as notices of coming events. Each issue has at least one section devoted to the novice.

ADDITIONAL HELPS come in printed form. There are numerous books and pamphlets available covering learning, licensing and station operation.

If self-study doesn't suit you, why not try an adult education evening class? There are such classes at both Berkeley and Ferrandale High Schools, offered at different times of the year.

Architect, Teacher In Conference Panel

Minoru Yamasaki of Troy, nationally known architect, and Dr. Milton Coveny of Southfield, associate professor of history at Wayne State University will be among the major participants in the fifth annual McGregor Detroit Adventure Conference to be held at the WSU Community Arts Auditorium on April 27, 28 and 29. "Creative Arts in an Age of Anxiety" is the topic to be discussed.

Registrations are being taken at the Detroit Adventure Office.

Behind the Welcome Mat

by CORINNE ABATT

Everytime I get angry with the kids for jumping around in the car and vow to get seat belts with the next one, I remember family rides in the old 1929 Buick when I was a child. The main diversion for my brother and me was to snap the silk window shades up and down, much to Mother's disgust. She vowed over and over that our next vacation was going to be without shades and it would serve us right to have to ride with the sun in our eyes.

MODERN POETRY, while interesting, is often baffling to me. A little quote I came across the other day has furnished some comfort. Robert Browning's answer — when questioned on the meaning of one of his poems — was "When that poem was written two people knew what it meant, God and Robert Browning. Now there is only one. Only God knows."

A FRIEND HAS been kidded about his basement full of empty baby food jars — he couldn't bear to see his wife throw those nice little containers away. Now that folks have discovered how handy they are for storing 100s of little items like screws, tacks, flower seeds, sequins and beads (as well as serving as attractive gift containers for home grown herbs and homemade jellies), our friend has the last, loud laugh.

THE QUICKEST WAY to make a superb housekeeper out of a mediocre one is to put a "For Sale" sign in front of the house.

IT WAS AMUSING to read a warning to parents to let the kids do their own homework. Our elementary schooler is starting on her second year of German, learning to do fractions with a thing called a fraction aide, had a section on outer space last year and is now studying the chemical composition of matter. I not only couldn't offer any help, I don't even know what she's talking about. It's comforting to know that she will be on hand when I sign up for some college refresher courses.

WHEN THE monthly bills pile up and the fight for the dollar gets that grim, it's fun to remember the time when the greatest treasures you could own were a nickel, a sack full of buckeyes and an empty fifty tin.

MSUO Classes For Families

Two Saturday morning classes for parents and children will begin Saturday at Michigan State University Oakland.

Vistas in Astronomy for Parent and Child, and Family Studio in Art will be offered in the non-credit program of the Division of Continuing Education.

The spring term offerings are the result of the success last term of the first parent and child course, Exploring Chemistry. This course brought 22 parents and 25 children to the campus during the winter and was filled to capacity shortly after plans for it were announced.

Vistas in Astronomy will combine a series of lectures and films with visits to an observatory and a planetarium. Ruth Hedeman of the University of Michigan's McMath-Hulbert Observatory at Lake Angelus will instruct the class. (Miss Hedeman also offers a Monday evening adult course at MSUO, Introduction to Astronomy.)

In her parent and child course she plans an introduction to astronomy for the child of 11 years
