Michigan Bell Allocates $777,000 for Area Service

An outlay of nearly $80.6 million will be made this year for expansion and improvement of facilities, Michigan Bell Telephone Co. has announced.

In the construction program, one of the largest in the company's history, more than $777,000 has been earmarked for new and expanded facilities in Birmingham and the Westchester area.

Robert L. Kilpatrick, Michigan Bell manager, said the 1962 outlay will push the company's total post-war expenditures past the billion dollar mark.

"As one of the largest corporate investments made in the state in the years following the war, this huge sum reflects the continuing growth of Michigan and the corresponding need for more and better communications," Kilpatrick said.

Kilpatrick added: "Our 1962 program is based on sound expectations that the future will see a continuation of this growth in our state and the opportunity for us to grow with it. In short, we could not consider an investment of this magnitude without being firmly convinced of the state's future."

Total gain in telephones for the year is expected to reach 85,000, coupled with an increase of 7.3 per cent in long distance calls, Kilpatrick said.

IN THE AREA of the company plans to spend $474,000 for equipment in customers' homes and offices. About $78,000 is set aside for added central office equipment in the area, and $221,000 for cable, wire, poles, and other outside plant. The balance of the outlay will be for miscellaneous facilities.

Reaching into virtually every section of the state served by Michigan Bell, the program calls for

Torch Drive Service Gives Legal Advice

The Legal Aid Bureau, a Torch Drive service, reported it has helped toward a solution in nine cases involving Birmingham residents and four from Bloomfield Hills during the past year.

The Bureau, although financed by the United Community Services from funds raised in the Torch drive, is directed by the Legal Aid Committee of the Detroit Bar Association. It is headed by Cleveland Thurber, member of a prominent Detroit legal firm, as its president and board chairman.

The Legal Aid Bureau was organized by the Detroit Bar Association in 1948. It is a link in the chain of the National Association of Legal Aid Organizations, through which the legal profession recognizes its traditional obligation to serve the poor for the better administration of justice.

Professor Cites College Training A Job Necessity

ANN ARBOR—Many Americans regard higher education as a means of getting out of work for life, instead of a preparation for life's work.

"That's how far the insatiable drive for the college degree has driven us," says Assoc. Prof. Norman Harris of the U. of M. Center for the Study of Higher Education.

"American parents, though they may have been manual workers themselves, have wanted their sons to become something they themselves were not; and they have seen education, and especially higher education, as the path to success."

"In a sense, our problem is one of terms," says Harris. "Industrial and technical are words that make sense to us in terms of jobs. This tendency to look down our noses at education for work is a juvenile trait which we must outgrow."

HARRIS ADDS that education for the world of work is a proper role for colleges, and that community colleges are best fitted to give this preparation.

"Besides engineering and industrial technicians, there is a need of college-level training for many other jobs of a semi-professional and highly skilled nature," Harris says, citing such fields as nursing, medical, dental, x-ray technology, business data processing, accounting, office management, law enforcement, and high-level technical training.

Rotarians to Hear Prof

James M. Davis, D.Ed., director of the University of Michigan International Center, will speak at the Monday meeting of Birmingham Rotary Club. Dr. Davis will discuss "A National Policy for International Educational Exchange."

Davis, associate professor of higher education, gives general supervision to a program which supports the varied international interests of the university, principally centering in a large body of foreign students.

In 1960 more than 1325 students from 80 nations were studying for degree and another 215 post-graduate foreign scholars were working in research and teaching. The International Center staff provides personal counseling and administrative services in support of the university's relations with these students.

Group activities in the international area are numerous, including receptions, discussion groups and social activities conducted or coordinated by the Center staff directly, or through the International Students Association and eighteen nationality and regional student organizations.
