

What one becomes, where he goes... the answers to these questions depend, for the most part, on one of his life's factors: what he thinks he becomes; where he is because of what he thinks—for the sum total of one's days adds up to the sum total of his personal desires, urges and impulses. To be sure, others may influence one, circumstances seemingly beyond one's control may contribute to one's destiny... but mostly one is on his own responsibility.
