

Library Science Scholarships Open to Students

Eight scholarships in library study are being offered by the Michigan State Board of Libraries, according to Miss Genevieve M. Casey, state librarian and secretary of the board.

Designed to stimulate interest in rural public library work in Michigan, the scholarships are being offered for the third straight year through funds provided by the Federal Library Services Act.

INCLUDED ARE four $500 scholarships for a two-year library aide training program at Ferris Institute in Big Rapids and four $2,000 graduate scholarships in library science in any accredited library school in the country. Candidates for the library aide scholarships at Ferris must be accepted in the library aide program at Ferris and qualify for a scholarship award. For further information, interested persons should write to: Rural Public Library Scholarships, State Library, 125 East Shawwassee street, Lansing, or apply direct to the Registrar, Ferris Institute. Final date for filing application is April 1.

CANDIDATES FOR the four graduate scholarships in library science must have provisional acceptance from an accredited library school. Application should be made directly to Rural Public Scholarships, State Library, Lansing. Final date for filing is March 1.

W. W. ANDERSON, JR.

Name Chairman Of Torch Drive For This Year

The Detroit-area Torch Drive will be headed this year by Wendell W. Anderson Jr., president of Bundy Tubing Company and a vice president of the United Foundation.

William M. Day, president of Michigan Bell Telephone Company and of the United Foundation, announced the appointment of Anderson as general campaign chairman for the 14th annual Torch Drive to be held Oct. 15 through Nov. 8.

"WE ARE elevating to top leadership in the Torch Drive a man who not only has devoted years of service to its success, but who also is the son of one of the founders of the United Foundation," Day said.

Anderson's father, the late Wendell W. Anderson, was board chairman of the United Foundation when it was founded in 1949. One of the three meeting rooms in the U.F. headquarters at 1528 Woodward Avenue was donated by members of his family and named in his honor.

ANDERSON himself has long been active in the Torch Drive, serving as a chairman of the General Manufacturing unit and, last year, as chairman of the Advance Gifts Committee, which works toward obtaining piece-setting gifts prior to the opening of the regular campaign. The new Torch Drive general chairman is a native of Pittsburgh, Pa., a graduate of Hotchkiss School and Yale University. He has been president of Bundy Tubing Company since December, 1959.

The Torch Drive, first and most successful United Fund campaign, has raised $192,000,000 for health and community services in the past 13 years.

When you give to charity. . .

Thoughtful planning by you and your counsel can often produce substantial savings in your program of gifts to charitable, religious and educational organizations.

In some unusual situations, the savings resulting from thoughtful planning can be startling. For example: Suppose an individual in the 90% income tax bracket proposes to sell stock with a cost of $1,000 at its present market value of $10,000. After an income tax of $2,250 on a gain of $9,000 he will net $7,750. However, since neither capital gains nor capital losses are recognized when capital assets are donated to a charitable organization, he can donate the stock and obtain a $10,000 deduction which will reduce his income tax by $9,000. The individual will net $1,250 more than he would have netted had he sold the stock.

Rewarding results are not confined to the unusual situation.

The form of gifts is the most important single element from the point of view of both the donee and the donor in planning a successful program of charitable giving.

With respect to the donor, as a general rule, a program of lifetime giving creates a larger estate for the benefit of the donor's family than would be possible if the donor gave exactly the same amount to charity by Will. A gift during lifetime reduces the donor's income tax and thus increases the donor's estate by the amount of the income tax saved. At the same time, since the donated property is not included in the donor's taxable estate, lifetime giving also saves estate taxes.

It is not necessary to give up the income from property in order to make a gift to charity during the lifetime of the donor. A gift may be made with income retained for the life of the donor and any other person, or for some other specified period. Such a gift entitles a donor to a charitable deduction on his income tax return for the present value (the value of the property transferred less the present value of the right to income for the actuarial life expectancy of the donor or for the life of the donor and some other person or for some other specified period) of the property that passes to charity.

This is not confined to income producing securities. A donor may also give a home or fine art to a charitable organization and retain possession of the home or art object for his lifetime or the lifetime of some other person. Gifts may be made through an instrument of transfer devised by a charitable organization or by a trust agreement or by deed. Gifts to charity with a retained life estate do not reduce the maximum marital deduction on the death of the donor from the deduction permitted if the donor had retained the property and disposed of it by Will to charity.

Additionally, the thoughtful planner keeps to an absolute minimum any restrictions on the organization's right to make free use of the contribution. The most valuable gift, from the charity's point of view, is a gift immediately available and without restrictions as to use. A gift with a retained life estate also gives the charity the capacity to make free use of the funds upon termination of the life estate. A gift to charity accompanied by substantial restrictions as to the use of the donations creates difficulty when there is no longer need for the use specified by the donor.

A program of giving affects the planning of your estate. You should seek advice of counsel with respect to a program of charitable giving and also with respect to planning your estate. The officers of the Trust Department at National Bank of Detroit will be glad to discuss these matters with you and your attorney at any time.
