PICTURE TALK

by BOB OSBORN

ARE YOU CONFUSED?

Are you in the market for a camera?
Are you in a dither about where to make your purchase?
We can't blame you if you are confused!

Unfortunately, there has been a great deal of hocus-pocus presented in many advertisements. Stores that have made good names for themselves through their sales of cans of beans and jars of jellies have suddenly entered the field of camera selling. It seems that every type of salamivender has jumpd on the photo band wagon.

But seriously, do you believe that those operations have the real knowhow needed for selling, teaching, and servicing? After all, your camera is not just a can of beans!

A camera is an important investment. In most cases, it should last you a life time. The camera shop is in business to help you enjoy every aspect of picture-taking.

A CAMERA SHOP IS DEDICATED TO SERVICE.

That is how he manages to survive or—better yet—to grow! When something goes wrong with your equip nent, he won't tell you to take it up with the manufacturer.

He is a reputable merchant and stands up in front of the camera he sells—and not five miles behind it!

Some day you may want to learn about filters—or do some fancy tricks with your camera. You can be certain the camera shop will be pleased to call you a pupil for life.

Be a customer who can say, "I am glad I bought my camera in a camera shop." Don't be the one who will wind up saying, "I wish I had bought my camera in a camera shop."

15 YEARS AGO
Feb. 13, 1947

At a special Board of Education meeting Tuesday evening, Superintendent Dwight B. Ireland revealed that in response to a spontaneous request for school-sponsored and approved clubs, made by a number of former members of Baldwin secret societies, he would take steps to establish a democratic system of school clubs which might be supervised through a special director of club activities or some modification of the plan.

Choose The Fuel That Keeps The Future In Mind Today

The future never looked brighter for the familiar blue flame—the symbol of natural gas service. It will continue in 1962, as in the past, to be the mark of excellence for home heating, cooking, water heating and clothes drying. Dependable natural gas does these important household tasks fast, economically, and efficiently.

But what are some of the new applications of this quiet, versatile fuel for the years ahead?

Progressive blue flame service now offers a new burner which can broil steak on both sides simultaneously . . . gas heating and air conditioning combination wall panels for perfect year-around climate control . . . radiant gas burners that warm patios and play areas . . . portable gas appliances such as steak grills, coffee makers and toasters . . . ornamental gas lights for driveways, patios and recreational areas whose soft yellow light also repels insects . . . gas-heated driveways that eliminate snow shoveling and hazards of ice . . . These and many more applications, both in the home and in industry, prove natural gas is the blue flame of multiple service for today's modern living.
