Elliott Sees Little Change In Local Government Rules

"Don't look for many changes in the provisions for local government in the new constitution," Council Delegate Arthur C. Elliott Jr. told municipal representatives at the Region IV regional meeting of the Michigan Municipal League at Pleasant Ridge on Jan. 11.

"There will be some changes, but not major changes. For example, urban townships will be considered, but the township will not be eliminated."

Speaking at the dinner session of the one-day meeting, Elliott, chairman of the Local Government Committee, outlined the organization and general background of the Convention and the work of his committee in particular.

New regional officers selected at the meeting are James Eiele, mayor of Center Line, chairman; Clayton Fraser, village president, Flushing, vice chairman; and Virgil Knowles, city manager, Oak Park, secretary.

Over 100 mayors, village presidents, councilmen and other elected and appointed municipal officials from League member cities and villages, attending the meeting heard sessions on assessments and equalization, cooperative action to solve municipal problems and municipal liability and insurance.

Region IV is made up of Oakland, Genesee and Macomb counties.

Donald C. Eckert, manager of the Southeast Oakland County Water Authority, discussed the organization, operation and purposes of this authority and also the Southeast Oakland County Incinerator Authority, of which he is also engineer-manager.

Ashdon J. Berst, coordinator, Twelve Towns Relief Drains, described the organization of this cooperative effort to provide sanitary and storm sewers as a joint project of several Oakland County municipalities.

David Firestone, city manager of Troy, pointed out other areas in which cooperative action might provide greater economy or efficiency in providing municipal services, as in purchasing, fire and police protection, health departments, etc.

Mothers' March of Dimes

Birmingham polio victims Mrs. June Heinz (left) and Mrs. Virginia McNeillage plan the community's part in the 1962 New March of Dimes campaign. Although confined to wheelchairs, the co-chairmen of the Birmingham area Mother's March prepare for the annual drive to be held from 7 to 8 p.m. Jan. 30. Mrs. Heinz, 575 Greenwood, cuts and pastes maps of the area, dividing the community into districts for solicitation, while Mrs. McNeillage telephones potential volunteers. Volunteers are needed for the Mother's March. Interested persons are requested to call MI 4-6856 or MI 7-0628.

Commission OK's 3 Appointments

Birmingham city commissioners Monday night reappointed two members to the South Oakland Hospital Authority and one to the board of appeals for the fire prevention bureau.

Renamed to the hospital board were: John E. Martz, 724 Lakeview; and Commissioner William E. Roberts.

Renamed to a five-year term on the fire prevention bureau board was Carl B. Marr, 465 Fairfax.

B'ham Area JA's Plan Trade Fair In Late January

Sixteen industrial trade fairs involving 8,000 business teens will be staged throughout southeastern Michigan during National Junior Achievement Week. The year's observance runs from Jan. 28 through Feb. 3.

Locally, the annual trade fair will be held on Jan. 29, 30 from 5-9 p.m. at 177 South Woodward, next to the Birmingham Theater.

Some 150 teenage industrialists from the Birmingham area and eight miniature corporations will participate in this area's Junior Achievement Trade Fair this year.

DESIGNED to show "JA in action," the 16 industrial fairs will also feature the sale of hundreds of products ranging from furniture, electrical items and utensils to jewelry, novelties and adult games.

According to Charles T. Fisher, III, vice president of National Bank of Detroit and general chairman of Junior Achievement Week, the trade fairs attracted more than 9,000 people last year. Fisher estimated that upwards of $50,000 worth of merchandise will be displayed for sale during this year's JA Week in southeastern Michigan.

THE TRADE FAIRS also plan to feature professional industrial exhibits and show typical JA corporations "in action" by simulating all phases of business activities in firms which have been called the smallest companies in the world.

Local Mr. and Miss Achievement finalists will act as official host and hostess for the annual trade fair and special literature explaining the Junior Achievement organization both nationally and internationally will be distributed.

B'field Youth Freed on Bond

Lawrence Weis, 19-year-old Bloomfield Hills youth, has been freed on $7,500 bond on a charge of armed robbery in New Orleans, La.

Weis, a Tulane University student, is accused of robbing a Louisiana State University teacher.

The youth is in a New Orleans Hospital recovering from a gunshot wound in his chest suffered in the mishap.

POLICE SAID Weis was wounded by the teacher, Leo B. Seiden Jr., 38, after the youth and a companion had beaten and robbed the instructor.

Seiden was arrested by New Orleans police on a charge of possessing photographic pictures.

Weis is the son of C. Arthur Weis, 335 Barden Road, former general manager of the Detroit News.
