Behind the Welcome Mat

by CORINNE ABATT

Our five year old son had the lawn mower out a few days ago and was gamely trying to mow the front lawn. His older sister insisted that she be allowed to take her turn with the mower.

"Girls," he sniffed, "don't mow lawns—that's man's work!"

"But, Mama moves the lawn sometimes and she's a girl!" Sister argued.

I listened and didn't have the heart to tell them that this district was the man's job to catch the fish and woman's job to cook it, I'll bet they argued over who cleans it. It is a husband's job to clean the garage and his wife's duty to clean the house, who takes care of that twilight zone, the basement?

A FRIEND WHO often substitutes as a kindergarten teacher says she usually tells the class her name as soon as she arrives. However, one day things happened fast and she neglected the introduction.

A little later a small boy walked up to her and said, "Teacher, may I go to the potty?"

The substitute stooped down to his level and said softly, "Honey can't you say lavatory?"

"Oh," the child burst out, "Is that your name?"

A LITTLE GIRL came home one day and told her mother that her day camp was going to do a program about Indians.

"I've got a part," she said. Then as an afterthought, added, "I'm a Sitting Bull."

American Festival Of Music Features Top Jazz Performers

The American Festival of Music, Detroit's biggest popular music presentation, will be held at Cobo Arena for the second year, it was announced this week by H. Terry Snowday Jr., newly elected Festival president.

The dates are the weekend of Aug. 25-26.

Signed for this year's show is an American Festival of Music newcomer, George Shearing, and his quintet.

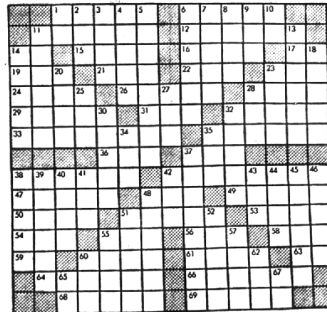

SLATED FOR return performances are Duke Ellington and his orchestra, Pete Fountain and his quintet and pianist Ahmad Jamal and his trio.

Literally by popular request, executive producer Ed Sarkesian is bringing in from Chicago Father Joseph Dustin, the banjo-playing Redeemer priest, who proved a smash hit last year.
