Correspondent's First Letter Anticipates Excitement of Camp

From LANETTE RUCINSKI, Girl Scout correspondent, Senior Girl Scout Roundup, Burton Bay, Vt. Green means rising above blue Lake Umbagog, hundreds of tents and 10,000 Girl Scouts — these were the thoughts present in the minds of 24 Southern Oakland Girl Scouts last week while en route to the Senior Girl Scout Roundup, Burton Bay, Vt., via a special Canadian National Railway train.

sixth largest in Vermont) guarded by the United States Army and located in the Green Mountains, where Ethan Allen and his "Green Mountain Boys" once captured Fort Ticonderoga from the British. LIVING IN THIS giant encampment are 8,500 Girl Scouts and 1,500 adults, who have gathered from 47 very state in the union, every U.S. territory and possession and four countries of six continents. Ranging from 11 to 18 years of age, and originating from different backgrounds and beliefs, the Scouts will nevertheless, have met the same qualifications and share the same principles. Though each state will be represented by interesting demonstrations and displays, the foreign scouts and guides are sure to attract the eyes of American girls with their bright uniforms and demonstrations.

Driving Skills Same Throughout Country

According to an industry official, the vacationer traveling over the country's network of highways this summer won't find any real difference in the driving skills required from those he should be using in his home town. In a statement issued in connection with the trucking industry's July Courtesy and Safety Campaign titled "Vacation Driving," Robert Osterman, director of the Michigan Council of Safety Supervisors, pointed out that contrary to mixed ideas and beliefs about traveling on two and four-lane highways, divided highways and free-way highways, the vacationer won't have any trouble if he adheres to the basic rules of the road that he practices in home town traffic.

to an accident to back up into overtaking traffic in an effort to get to the interchange — and the results can be especially disastrous on high speed roads. Osterman pointed out that on the road as in the city, following the vehicle ahead too closely is extremely dangerous because of the possibility that the lead vehicle may stop short and be hit in the rear by the one behind. Osterman closed his remarks by asking vacationers to use their city driving skills with alertness for safe, happy vacation. He reminded them that the surest way of avoiding an accident is to avoid conflicting with other traffic — keeping in the right lane except to pass and maintaining the same general speed as other traffic.
