The Community and Schools of Birmingham, of our admiration for your character and of our friendly good wishes for your future. We hope that it may give you and Mrs. Vliet enduring pleasure to know the esteem in which we hold you both.

No repairs will be spent on the nine houses owned by the village in the block at the middle of the civic center between the Municipal Building and the Hablitzel Public Library, at least for the present, it was decided Monday by the commission. A suggestion by Village President Harry Allen that the houses be removed immediately and the block turned into park property, for which it was originally purchased, was regarded as involving too much expense for the present.

A new automobile service garage opened in Birmingham last week when the Butler Automotive Service opened for business at 407 North Woodward, the former location of the Henry Dier Corporation. Robert Butler Jr., of Birmingham and Clarke H. Jeffers of Hazel Park are the proprietors of the new garage and both are former servicemen. The new business will offer motorists a complete line of services including wrecks and towing work. A bumping and painting department is a feature.

Growing a great variety of foods and leading the nation in many, Michigan comes closer to setting the family table completely, than any other state.

People's Column

Golf

Completed tennis courts and Quanton Lake, one of the most heavily used recreation areas in the city.

The Eccentric also forgot to include passive recreation areas in comparing our city with national figures. Birmingham should be commended for having a fine balance of both active and passive type recreation areas.

CITY FIGURES show that one out of every five persons in Birmingham plays golf. What group of people (third not included) would be deprived by the construction of a nine-hole golf course with area for picnicking and winter sports.

In a recent recreation survey our citizens stated a preference for more facilities for golf and winter sports. If we are to live for and by people in a democratic society, then let the people decide the issue.

Hogan's Column
On School Costs
Draws Praise

To the Editor:

Just a line to say that I like the "Eccentricities" column by Mr. (Henry M.) Hogan—appearing at the top of your editorial page.

His article in the May 31 issue gives an excellent description of school costs—and why so much additional state-tax money is needed each year over and beyond our local property taxes.

MOST OF us are too busy to keep in touch with costs of local and state governments—and with the reasons why our lawmakers seem constantly to be seeking more and more funds.

Information such as Mr. Hogan has been presenting to your readers is very interesting and constructive.

Race Amity Day Shows
A 'Unity of Mankind'

To the Editor:

Since the increasing number of human relations courses and organizations in our colleges and communities indicate the growing concern as to what our relations should be with new neighbors coming from other parts of the country and the world?

Is this concern due in part to the students, exchange professors, business men and tourists going to other countries and coming to our own?

Is it due in part to two world wars and their aftermaths in Korea, the Middle East, the Congo and Laos, during which our young men and women have been getting acquainted first-hand with the "other half" of the world?

IS IT DUE in part to the laws and ordinances aimed at acts of discrimination because of religion, race, color or culture?

Whatever the reasons, isn't it becoming increasingly evident that the basic hindrance to any effort for improving human relations with our new neighbors is the prejudices we harbor against those we have heretofore not considered as our neighbors?

If so, then the prime objective of any human relations course or community effort should be toward the elimination of prejudices. As prejudices are matters of the heart which dominate the heart, it is not surprising that the initiative in bettering human relations is coming from people and organizations motivated by their religious convictions.

FOR EXAMPLE, the Baha'is of the United States observed Race Amity Day June 10 as one more way of demonstrating the unity of mankind regardless of race, religion, color or culture.
