Dressage

howl, honors the memory of Col. Tuttle and his horse, the United States outstanding exponent and competitor in the difficult field of grand Prix Dressage—their names to be read at the competition required for the Olympic Games.

Col. TUTTLE represented the United States with great distinction in the Olympics of 1932 and 1936. At the time Col. Tuttle was preparing himself for this competition, he was practically alone in the field; the United States had no qualified dressage coaches, trainers or riders.

Col. Tuttle undertook the difficult task of self-instruction, and he is training both himself and his horse through trial and error, and with many hours of practice. He, however, has read everything on the subject he could find in print.

HE PROVED himself an excellent student and horseman, and it is to his credit that under these pioneering conditions he was able to finish as high as a third place in the final round against the finest horses and riders that several hundred years of experience could produce on the continent of Europe.

It was largely through Col. Tuttle's efforts that a dressage was firmly established as a competitive sport in this country. Since the Olympics of 1936, with the exception of the war years, the United States has progressed rapidly in this field.

Today, in part, as a result of his pioneering efforts, and in part through the Tuttle Trophy competition, the United States has excellent dressage coaches and trainers, capable horses, and well-prepared riders.

SEEKING THE need for a continuing program of development for dressage horses and riders for International Competitions, Mr. Duffy, as a member of the Board of Directors of the U.S.A.E.T., Inc., undertook to assist in establishing this program.

Among other things, he helped establish the Tuttle Trophy competition, and donated the trophy itself as part of the long-range program. Directors of the U.S.A.E.T., Inc., undertook to assist in establishing this program.

THE FIRST competition for the Tuttle Trophy was staged by the U.S.E.T. and the Bloomfield Open Hunt Club and held on the Hunt Club grounds in Bloomfield Hills in 1958.

That year, Miss Karen McIntosh of Bedford Village, N. Y., rode her horse Scipio to victory and thus became the first to have her name inscribed on the trophy. Miss McIntosh subsequently became a member of the Pan American Games, however, it was Miss Patricia Galvin of Santa Barbara, Calif., who was the highest-scoring U. S. competitor. This automatically made her the winner of the Tuttle Trophy for 1959.

THE YEAR 1960 saw Miss Galvin and Mrs. Jessica Newbourn of Avon Lake, N. Y., going to the Olympics in Rome as the official U. S. Dressage Team. Again, it was Miss Galvin who scored highest for the U. S. and became the automatic winner of the Tuttle Trophy. In both years, Miss Galvin rode her horse Rath Patrick.

In this competition, Miss Newbourn, on Forstrat, was the winner; and thus she is now the defending champion in this year's event.

It is anticipated that Miss Newbourn and Forstrat will be at the Detroit Horse Show to defend.

THE TUTTLE Trophy event is held in two rounds on consecutive days. The first round will start on Saturday, June 30, at 10:00 a.m. on the grounds of the Bloomfield Open Hunt Club in Bloomfield Hills.

It will continue on Saturday afternoon until all contestants have ridden. Each rider will perform for

The Mental Patient's Secrets

Q. Some time ago you wrote that a doctor would not reveal information about his patients except in certain circumstances. What about psychiatrists?

A. "Keeping faith" is essential to psychiatry. In fact, the patient the psychiatrist (a medical doctor trained in mental disorders) must probe deep into the patient's most secret thoughts and feelings. The patient exposes his dreams, fantasies, sins, and all the dark recesses of his mind to the psychiatrist. He is willing to do so only because he knows the doctor will "keep faith." There are, of course, certain circumstances under which the doctor might need to inform others of what he has so told. For example, the patient might reveal plans to commit a crime—"I'm going to kill the mayor tonight." Obviously, the doctor would then have to take steps to protect the mayor. The physician has an obligation to prevent injury or sickness as well as to cure the victims of such misfortune.

Arthritis-Pregnancy

Q. Is it true that symptoms of rheumatoid arthritis subside during pregnancy? Is the relief lasting?

A. Active rheumatoid arthritis will frequently calm down during pregnancy but flare up after the baby arrives. Some have attempted to determine whether the arthritic relief is due to the presence of some circulating substance present in the body only during pregnancy. Not only has been carried so far.
