

Apportionment Covered In Article IV

Legislative apportionment — one of the most controversial matters debated in the constitutional convention — is covered in Article IV dealing with the Legislative Branch of state government.

The new document establishes a commission equally representing the major political parties to re-apportion periodically House and Senate seats in accordance with the requirements of the constitution. Supreme court review is provided in the event of disagreement of the commission.

Promoted to Eagle

to apportionment strictly on the basis of population.
It is safe to say that no one got exactly what he wanted in the resulting compromise, but the application of the principles laid down in the new document to Michigan to the forefront of the states in fairness and equitability of its system for allotting representation among its population.
Article IV provides that the position of auditor general, presently by the U.S. House of Representatives is employed to allocate seats to the various districts.

THE STATE SENATE apportionment is worked out on a formula which gives 80 per cent weight to population and 20 per cent weight to area. The actual apportionment of the senate is not ordered until after the new document is adopted. If the new document is adopted, one additional senator will be assigned to each of the state's most populous southeastern counties — Wayne, Oakland, Macomb and Genesee. Senate membership is increased from 24 to 28.
The debate on apportionment in the convention reflected clear differences among the delegates' political philosophies. The Republican majority insisted on some consideration of area as well as population in allocation of legislative seats. Democrats were committed

Wall Lighting May Be Used For Versatility

THEY ARE versatile in function, since they may serve to supplement general room lighting, for specific task lighting or for dramatic accent.
They come in a variety of designs to fit virtually any basic decorative plan. Increasingly popular are matching wall and ceiling fixture ensembles.
Value, versatility and variety are three reasons for the growing popularity in modern homes of wall lighting from permanently mounted fixtures.
Wall fixtures free valuable space in the home by eliminating the clutter of too many table and floor lamps.
