The Birmingham Eccentric

Thursday, November 8, 1962

Beginning during the recent World War II, materialistic science has made tremendous headway—especially in the field of electronics. It's a far cry from Columbus, Magellan, Marco Polo to today's "Riders of the Skies" in our missile-projected satellites. Hurled at society are demands that "we meet today's new challenges". Well, the offerings of science really are not the challenges—only the morality of people is challenged.
