

Toy Selection More Varied This Season

The magic of Christmas means many things to many people, yet Christmas belongs primarily, to children. To them it signifies, in one word, TOYS. And each year, as if by magic, the selection of toys made available by the designers and manufacturers becomes more varied and more amazing.

Let's talk about dolls.
True, little girls like the baby type, ones they can cuddle, diaper, dress and undress—but wait till they see "Bugs Bunny," the huggable plush talking doll, who pipes up with various wisecracks or "Beany Boy," full of cuddly "rag" doll appeal.

THEN THERE'S "Ceecil" and his disguise kit—he can be turned into 18 different characters. Little of "Casper the Talking Ghost," 15" tall with a terrycloth costume, has a patenting voice unit (no batteries) and says ghostly things like "I'm a friendly ghost" or "I'm not afraid."

Of course there are baby dolls that cry, with eyes that close, rooted hair that can be brushed and styled over and over. Then you'll see "Chatty Cathy" with dressup and sleepy-time outfits.

LITTLE BOYS can help detect the culprit with "Lie Detector," a test of skill in deduction of "whodunit;" there's an exciting "Sonar Sub Hunt," a naval battle game involving the search for enemy subs in mine-infested waters!

Strictly official are the new Dick Tracy "Patrol Squad" sets, with two realistic toy guns that use perforated caps. The "Buffalo Hunter Set" with a pistol and holster, Winchester rifle, safe (flexible) hunting knife and belt scabbard is just the thing for little-boy safaris into the jungle.

All is not wild and woolly. The "Strum-Fun GeeTar," teaches rhythm and music, a matter of interchangeable discs, and comes equipped with shoulder carrying cord. "Yogi Bear" has a "gee-tar" named after him, too, as well as cowboy and popeye models.

JET PLANES and skydivers are startlingly realistic in their 1962 toy versions and the giant barracuda atomic submarines carry polaris missiles.

"Showboat" little theatre appeals to youngsters of all ages. Kids can stage their own shows with colorful "actors." Or try a bevy of antique cars, science toys and games galore, "Flintstone" characters in wonderful hobby sets. It looks like the biggest, brightest, most exciting toy barrage that St. Nick ever transported across the sky, come Christmas Eve, 1962.
