

Observe Hadassah Month

In honor of the golden anniversary of Hadassah, the women's Zionist organization of America, Oct. 16 to Nov. 16 has been proclaimed "Hadassah Month." Tuesday the local Hadassah group met at the home of Mrs. Paul Borman, 1346 Ardmore, Birmingham, to receive an official proclamation from

County Officials Favor Plan for Jury Commission

Oakland County's five circuit court judges, the prosecuting attorney and the county bar association have come out in favor of forming a jury commission. They made their views known at a hearing by the Ways and Means Committee of the County Board of Supervisors last week. The county was given authority by the state legislature earlier this year to establish the commission. If Oakland follows the lead of Wayne, Macomb and Washtenaw Counties, a three-man jury commission would select a jury array once a year from lists of registered voters.

UNDER THE present system, prospective jurors are chosen by township supervisors and city assessors from city tax rolls. A commission would rule on the qualifications of prospective jurors but the judge would still rule on jurors for a particular trial. More residents would be eligible for jury duty under a commission because more appear on register voter lists than on tax rolls.

B'field Hills School Cited for Design

The East Hills Junior High School, Kensington and Opdyke, which will be completed Nov. 1, has received a citation for design excellence from the American Association of School Administrators.

The American Institute of Architects also showed the school plan as an outstanding school in the U. S. at the International Conference on Education, held in London, England, this summer under the auspices of UNESCO. The school plan was rated for its good grouping, effective site utilization and forward-looking plan.

Bits of Birmingham

Hats off to John Barta, salesman for Howard T. Keating Co., who thought he'd drop in at a church rummage sale last week to see what he could see. Always a very mannerly gentleman, Barta took off his hat to the ladies and proceeded to rummage. He did very well, coming up with a very fancy set of glass tumblers and a mighty nice picture frame. Juggling his purchases, he reached for his hat which he had put down on the counter just a moment before. You guessed it—someone else had found a bargain, too. Minus his topper, Barta left wearing a philosophical grin instead, knowing full well that he had helped a good cause to get ahead.

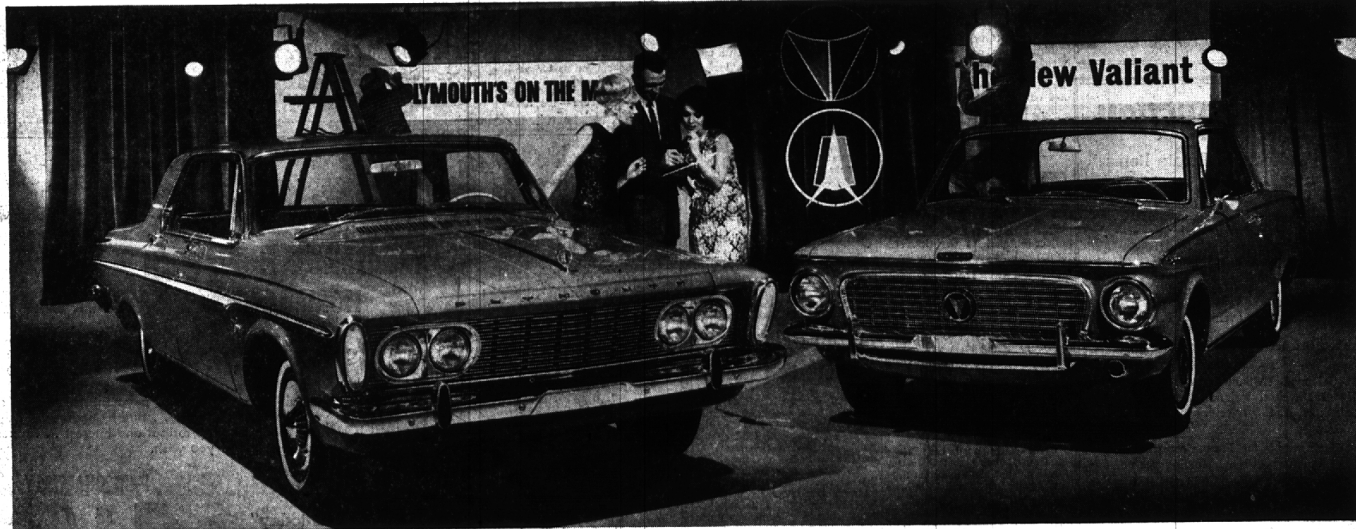

Dear Santa: Susan Likens is writing to tell you that for Christmas she would like a hair-dryer. "I like you, Santa Claus," she says. Please comply.

When dinner time rolled around last Thursday night, Sarah Ingraham followed the normal custom of washing her hands before meals. "Oh I forgot!" she exclaimed. "I wasn't going to wash my hands." Her father, Birmingham City Commissioner Carl F. Ingraham, said his 11-year-old Sarah was about seven feet tall that day—she had met and shaken hands with one George Romney.

Funeral services at Holy Name Church Oct. 15, a rosary was said at the William Vasa Funeral Home. Burial was in Holy Sepulchre Cemetery.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Twining is survived by a son, Donald E.; three sisters, Mrs. William Nealon of Seranton, Pa., Mrs. May Clay of Mansfield, O., Mrs. Catherine Best of Mentor, O., a brother, Dr. Patrick J. McNally of Campbell, Calif., and three grandchildren.
