Two Birmingham area families now claim two Eagle Scouts each. Paul and Jon Hawley, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Gartin Hawley, 910 Brooklawn, Troy, and Tom and Greg French, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Burr French, 2560 Dorchester, Birmingham, are all members of Troop 1025. Paul and Tom received scoutings highest rank award last Friday night at a court of honor. Sponsored by the Birmingham Kiwanis Club, the troop meets in the Pembroke Elementary School. Rudolph W. Pessel is the scoutmaster.

Electronic Report Cards Used in B'ham Schools

Electronic report cards and class schedules have come to Birmingham. Electronic data processing equipment is now being used in the Birmingham Public School District in an effort to meet increased demands of the improving educational program.

This equipment on experimental loan to the Board of Education, will provide a more efficient business operation of the schools and relieve the teachers of some of their clerical burden, school officials say.

Costs of the computer over a 10-year period will approximate the salary of one clerk over the same period.

when the scheduling of classes using the new equipment resulted in a minimum saving of 1,200 hours of labor. Normally this task involves extensive use of several people.

Once the preliminary preparation and planning were completed, the master schedule of 1,100 Groves students was electronically completed in 15 minutes. About 600 counseling hours were saved, school officials reported.

AS THE SYSTEM continues to grow, more efficient automation will lessen the need to hire additional clerical help. As a result of the success of this project, officials said, electronic scheduling will be used in all of the secondary schools next year.

Students at Groves and Barnum will receive electronically marked cards this fall. Seaborn and Derby students will receive hand-marked cards because of "unavoidable delays" in the installation of equipment. It is expected that by the second marking period, all secondary schools will be using the electronic card.

RETURNS TO the schools for this initial output were demonstrated in a pilot program at Groves High School this summer

Rickety Old House Has Many Charms

By RUTH VOGT
Special Writer

Beyond two lots many years ago stood an old wooden house. The ancient structure was inhabited by two elderly maiden ladies named Em and Allie Edwards.

Even though they had a brother, "dear Lou," he seldom was around. When he did come home the kitchen door was always closed and the blinds were pulled.

But this house sometimes was the most exciting spot in childhood.

Em, so thin that her dresses hung down her like drapes, and Allie, so stout that her dresses never did fit right, always made small children feel welcome by offering them cookies.

AFTER THE kitchen, the next room "admirer" was the front parlor, where heavy red drapes hung from the windows. Also in the room were three rocking chairs all looking too stately to sit in.

A square, dark table stood in front of the window and on it was a heavy black covered Bible with gold-embossed pages. Resting in the middle of the table was a lamp with a rose covered base.

On the worn carpet there were hundreds of tiny red roses half covered with green leaves. It was almost like having a flower garden in the front parlor.

OFF TO THE side of this parlor was a long bedroom where everything—walls, floors, spreads and curtains—were white. Everything was so immaculate that the children felt it would be a good place to recuperate should they become sick.

Even though neither of the sisters had ever married, they were understanding individuals and loved to hear the children tell them stories. The stories were often long and detailed but the sisters never interrupted.

"You're going to be a great story-teller when you grow up," Allie would say to each child after she had finished.

AS EACH child drew to a close, Em or Allie never forgot to remind the children to pay them another visit.

That was the only foolish thing they ever said. How could the children, especially since they were only 10, ever forget to come back?

Didn't Em and Allie realize that they had the most exciting house in the neighborhood?
