

Wash Hobgoblin Stains Quickly with Detergent

Halloween is fun time—and part of the fun is the scary goblin and costumed children who roam the neighborhood.

Cheaply dyed Halloween costumes and crepe paper decorations can cause permanent stains to your rugs and carpets.

According to technicians of the National Institute of Rug Cleaning, the danger is especially great on rainy autumn evenings. The fugitive dyes found in these costumes and decorations are almost always indelible after they transfer to textiles. They become permanent stains when they are allowed to dry.

SHOULD YOU discover a stain, immediate first-aid action is necessary.

Mix a teaspoonful of neutral soap in detergent in one-half pint of lukewarm water. Any of the detergents commonly advertised for safe washing of fine fabrics will do.

Apply the detergent solution directly to the stain with an eye dropper, a few drops at a time. Blot the stain area with clean white unstarred cloth or cleaning tissue, beginning at the outer edge and working toward the center. Re-

With winter approaching, the wisest advice a rose enthusiast in the cold northern half of the nation can take is: a mound of protection will be worth a bushful of glorious blooms next spring.

Simple protective practices will assure you that, come next spring, your bushes will reward you with all the eye-catching color and classic beauty for which the incomparable rose is cherished.

The majority of migrating birds fly within about a mile of the earth's surface. Night migrants commonly fly anywhere from a thousand to three thousand feet up, a bit lower if it is cloudy or foggy. Some of the day migrants do their southern traveling way down at treetop height. Early morning is the best time to watch for these low flyers. But don't bother going out if there's a heavy rain storm. In general, birds move only when skies are clear or merely cloudy. Heavy rain stops migration almost entirely.

The extent to which the information is helpful, he points out, depends on how shrewdly it is interpreted. All geophysicists, however, need this kind of data to make reasonable predictions.

GEOPHYSICAL techniques improve the oil driller's chances of striking it rich.

"The use of geophysics," Dr. Hinz said, "cuts the risk in half."

To aid in interpretation, Dr. Hinz has made detailed gravitational, magnetic and seismic observations in Michigan oil-producing areas and is developing methods with his graduate students for using the MSU computer to determine when similar measurements from other areas signify the likely presence of oil.

AT LEAST A dozen oil and mining companies, including some of the biggest in the nation, have demonstrated strong interest in Dr. Hinz's work.

He estimates that they have donated or lent to MSU the use of about $100,000 worth of geophysical instruments and about $50,000 in direct grants and fellowships.

The National Science Foundation has also participated by underwriting the cost of research performed by undergraduates during extensive field trips throughout the state.

Roadside parks developed along Michigan's state highways have become models for other states. The first fully-equipped roadside park in the nation was built in Michigan in 1935.

Pay Hike

JAMES CHESTNUT, manager of the Data Center, explained that the increases are being worked out as the regular compensation cycles are run through the huge computer. Checks due Oct. 31 will include the previous normal monthly payment, plus the new increase, plus the additional payment of three times the monthly increase.

Designed to reflect changes in the cost of living since 1957, when the last compensation increase for veterans disabled in service went into effect, the average payment will be 94 per cent more than the current rate.

Compensation for peacetime service-connected disabilities is paid at approximately 80 per cent of that for wartime service-connected disabilities.

IN ADDITION to payments based upon percentage of disability, additional statutory payments are made for specified disabilities or combinations of disabilities such as blindness, deafness, and loss of more than one limb.

The maximum amount that may be received by a wartime veteran who has no dependents, and who is so seriously disabled that he requires aid and attendance, has been increased under the new law from $600 to $725 monthly.
