

Groves' Graduates Brief Seniors on College Life

By BARR SCHIFFER
Special Writer

Graduates of Groves High School returned to their alma mater briefly Thursday, Dec. 27, during Christmas vacation. The students spoke on the problems and new situations that they have encountered so far in college. From 2:30 p.m. until 4:30 p.m. in the auditorium, an informal discussion was held for the benefit of current seniors at Groves. Lee Eyer, Pete Morse, Bob Rice, and Sharon Jackson gave their viewpoints and ideas on college life. Afterwards, refreshments were served in the cafeteria for all attending.

Mr. Saburo Yasuda, a Japanese graduate student of the University of Michigan, spoke to Mrs. Stout's sociology class just prior to the Christmas vacation on "Buddhism in Japan." As a part of their study on religion, these students have heard lectures on various important international religions.

Speakers representing the Methodist, Episcopalian, Catholic, Russian Orthodox, and Jewish faiths have discussed their beliefs, rituals and religious traditions for the benefit of the class. Mrs. Naomi Mandelbaum, English or teacher, spoke to the class about Judaism.

Also, in connection with the unit, the committee studying Mohammedism planned a class trip to a Moslem mosque in Dearborn. Oya Guven, Groves' Turkish exchange student, went with the class and helped by providing further information about her religion. In the future, the committees on Hinduism and Jehovah's Witnesses will discuss the doctrines of these religions.

National Thespian awards were announced during the annual Dramatic Christmas party held Dec. 28 at Camille Brunk's house. The party, lasting from 7 p.m. until 10:30 p.m., was attended by both long-standing members and those recently initiated. These awards went to Barb Kipp, Kathy Longeway, Jane Meinhardt, Gail Schuba, Bob Szymke, and Jane Upward.

These seven students all met the qualifications set up by the National Thespians, which are being a member of Dramatics, and having earned 10 points. Each point is worth 10 hours of work, and may be acquired by activities in plays or on committees.

Barnum Picks Staffers for 1963 Yearbook

By BILL COLLINS
Special Writer

The staff for the Barnum yearbook, the "Mapletonian," has been chosen. The co-editors are John Gillette and Linda Stubbs. The yearbooks will not be distributed until the end of the school year, but preparations must be started early. The "Mapletonian" goes on advance sale Jan. 7, and is on sale for two weeks. It is the only yearbook in the school system which has individual pictures of all the students. This is possible partly because Barnum has a fairly small "population" compared to other schools in the area.

A professional photographer is hired to take the official student pictures, but Mr. Blum, a teacher, takes candid pictures at various school activities for the yearbook. All the students appreciate the fact that we are lucky to have our own yearbook, and few people are found without one. Other staff members for this year's yearbook are Richard Bardly, Charles Bornhauser, Julie Chamberlain, Jeff Doane, Bob Handley, Joan Hinkamp, Jane Kenjoaki, Larry Kirchner, Rich Piel, Tom Robinson, David Rosenberger and Bob Wandel.

At every Barnum football and basketball game, the crowds, however large or small, are led in their rooting for the team by Barnum's cheerleaders. These girls, all ninth graders, tried out at the end of last year for these coveted spots. Clad in their blue-and-white outfits, these girls may be seen leaping high in the air, or waving a school pom-pom in a frenzy. The education it is during these three girls on this year's cheerleader squad are: Sue Woffley, captain, the unquestioning acceptance of Sue Roach, co-captain, and Gayle childhood and first develop the in-graduate, Martha Jean Payton, quistive mind of an adult. What Anne LeFevre, Linda Stubbs, Elise we learn, how we learn it, and

THE GOLDEN YEARS

There are three problems every man and woman must face when they retire. They are long-pants problems—big and serious.

They cannot be compromised with. They cannot be dodged. You must face them and whip them before you get on with your business.

The first is your concept of retirement. In the main, your concept of retirement is negative—if you are like most people. You see a few good things in it, among them rest and well-being.

But everything else is worry, bewilderment, and a considerable amount of fear.

THIS IS because retirement is the environment we learn in it all affects our future ways of thinking and acting. And we are privileged to be offered an education that is second to none in the entire world.

These three years, short though they are, have a profound effect on us. No matter what we may say or do, we are all very grateful for this golden opportunity for a wonderful education.

At every Barnum football and basketball game, the crowds, however large or small, are led in their rooting for the team by Barnum's cheerleaders. These girls, all ninth graders, tried out at the end of last year for these coveted spots. Clad in their blue-and-white outfits, these girls may be seen leaping high in the air, or waving a school pom-pom in a frenzy. The education it is during these three girls on this year's cheerleader squad are: Sue Woffley, captain, the unquestioning acceptance of Sue Roach, co-captain, and Gayle childhood and first develop the in-graduate, Martha Jean Payton, quistive mind of an adult. What Anne LeFevre, Linda Stubbs, Elise we learn, how we learn it, and will relatively new to us all. If you will think of the tomato for a moment you can solve the first problem.

The tomato, you know, was not always beautiful, red, and good to eat. It was poison, people thought, and eventually ugly. Therefore they learned better. Retirement is that tomato. It's a beautiful red, and good enough to eat. People just haven't learned it yet.

WHEN YOU go into retirement you have 60 to 65 years of living packed in your chest. You are a good physical package, or you would not have lived so long.

You have good mental equipment or you would not be walking around free. You have freedom that will not end again, unless you choose it.

Your concept must be that you are graduating, not from something but to something. You must train yourself to adapt to this concept. It is a logical one. And it is fundamental to your happiness.

The second problem of retirement is money.

THERE IS simply no way around it—you must have some. Without it you must resign yourself to public or family charity, and in either case to a miserable existence.

But you don't need much money. You can live in Tucson, Arizona for less than $200 a month for man and wife. The Sunshine Club there will tell you how.

You can live in Florida, as a couple, for $200 a month. The Chamber of Commerce in whatever town you choose can give you advice.

YOU CAN live in the middle belt of the South, in the small unpublicized towns in Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Arkansas for less money than anywhere else. In any of these places, you will live among at least a few people who have the same income you have.

That is important. If you live in the city, where your salary has been four times the amount of your pension, you would be wise to find a job.

THE THIRD problem of retirement is loneliness.

People who have known on your job will not have time for you after you retire. Old friends, though they love you still, will drift away. Even your children will find less glamour in you.

Argue with yourself until you believe that you MUST go out after retirement to grow a garden of new people to love you.

The Watch Hill, R. I. Coast Guard station is for sale, with a catch. Buyer must remove the buildings because the land on which the station stands is not for sale.

Passants in the Brittany section of France indicate by the placement of the ribbons on their wide-brimmed hats whether they are single or married.
