Happening

was discussing it. I heard one man say: 'I don't know if that was a concert or an art event but since musicians would refuse to consider it music, it must be art.'

"FEELING LIKE a reporter, I thought I'd try to get a statement from Professor Watts about what he was aiming for. 'Could you sum up in one sentence wh...'

"'NO,' he said before I finished, 'How can you sum up life?' "'Well, that's what I wanted to know.'

"I went to the "Yam dance" happening because I'm always on the lookout for possibilities for the Bloomfield Art Association programs or art festival." (Mrs. Gardner is a member of the exhibition committee) "I wondered if the people of Birmingham are ready for this sort of thing. Would they like it? How would they react?"

"It was a relief to walk outside after the performance. The whole thing gave me a sense of unreality and it was nice to be back in the predictable world again."

* * *

IT IS PRETTY hard to find a definition of art that includes an "art event" other than the general term of "performing arts." This "event," a meaningless collection of human cliches run off at random in the hope that some meaning will emerge, is taxing gullibility. But since one of the purposes of art is to cause humans to "resee" life, to re-evaluate what is meaningful, maybe there will be some value in this "art happening" movement happening haphazardly around the nation.
