Cranbrook Celebrates Homecoming

By DOUGLAS LIEBERMAN
Special Writer

Saturday, Oct. 26, the annual Cranbrook Homecoming celebration was held. Feature attractions were football and soccer games with out-of-state Western Reserve Academy. As is the custom, each of the five Cranbrook student houses built a display in the small gymnasium.

This year there was no general theme to the decorations (past themes have been the Civil War and Pioneer America) and each house chose to butcher an effigy Western Reserve player in its own way.

Fountains, under the direction of Bob Chambers, built a model wrecking crane operated by a Cranbrook Crane; Marquis, with Peter Boswell, set up a giant still cooking a dummy, with a slogan concerning "home brew."

Other decorations chairmen were Steve Burton for Towers, Chris Ueland for Stevens and Doug Fisher for Page. Bob Taggart was general coordinator.

FRIDAY, Oct. 18, all-school elections were held to create a new Inter-House Council with representatives from all the grades. Seniors elected were Peter Boswell, Bob Taggart, Bob Chambers, Doug Fisher and Dave Groff.

The Council will have a double function: generally it will act as a disciplinary committee, revising rules and judging minor violations; also it will act as a student voice to the faculty, representing student opinion and presenting any proposed changes in policy.

Bloomfield Queen and Her Court

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lack, 1205 Janlain Ct. The girls are (from left) Sherry Lundgren, Marilyn Jamieson, Pat Lack, Jean Kitchner and Nancy Shannon. Mary Hampton is in front.

The PTA-sponsored annual open house was held Oct. 24. The evening began at 8 when the parents went to homeroom for 20 minutes where they were invited to join the PTA.

Parents followed their children's regular classroom schedule. This was the parents' first opportunity to see the new science wing, remedial counseling area and the library addition.

The seventh grade mixed chorus, directed by Mr. Kenneth Ish, entertained the parents for the first lunch hour. The group, numbering 75, was accompanied by Christine Walker and Brenda Root.

The ninth grade mixed choir, directed by Mr. James Smela, performed during the second lunch hour. Margaret Stanton accompanied the 65-member group.

BARNUM'S football fortunes are rising this year with a 2-2 record, after defeating Norcup 7-0, Oct. 18.

Barnum's winning touchdown came in the second quarter on a 40-yard pass by Ray Collins to Ron Crooke. Ron carried the ball 25 yards for the touchdown.

THREE FEMINE intruders from the Press Club invaded the Electronics Club meeting Oct. 22. They discovered a multitude of new ideas concerning electro-magnets and transformers.

They also found activities for the club this year will consist of a club station, including an amateur radio, code training, and construction projects. The club is using the money they receive from dues to buy radio tubes and tools to further their knowledge of electronics.

One of the most important things the club does is to control and maintain the Barnum public address system.

Seniors Joseph Gerson and Patricia Parrott spoke concerning the World Court of the United Nations and its function at the Birmingham Community House Oct. 24, which was United Nations Day.

Also included in the program were a representative of the American Broadcasting Company and members of the local chapter of the American Association of the United Nations, who commented on different activities of the UN.

Don and Mary Cowles, part-time professional folk singers, performed at a BHHS assembly Oct. 21. Because of the recent interest in folk music, German Instructor Mr. Gerald Teachman, who is a personal friend of the Cowles, invited the singers to perform at the high school and to give a first-hand demonstration of folk singing.

The Cowles have been working as a team for nearly two years. Mr. Cowles, who attended Wayne

State University, is employed in the hydraulics division at Vickers Corporation in Detroit.

GUY CATHERINE, 17-year-old from Paris, France, is one of the seven foreign students studying at BHHS this year.

Guy, who arrived in Bloomfield Hills three weeks ago, toured San Francisco, New York and Boston before coming to this area. After completing studies at the high school, Guy plans to attend Wayne State University.

While in the United States, Guy is staying with the Frank Basick family in Birmingham. The Basick family spent eight months with Guy and his family in Paris last year.

GUY commented concerning the differences between schools in the United States and France. In France, classes are conducted on a more formal basis than in the United States. Parisian schools commence at 8:30 a.m. and allow two hours for lunch beginning at 11:30 a.m. Classes usually end at 6:00 p.m.

Senior Float Wins Groves' Homecoming

By PAM CARPENTER
Special Writer

Climaging Groves' Homecoming weekend, the Regalia Ball was held Saturday, Oct. 19 in the school gymnasium. The senior class sponsored the dance which was highlighted by the crowning of the Homecoming queen, Tina Steele. Tina's court was made up of Pam Crews, Pam Tull, Dianne Loppnow, Sally Bricker and Carol Sirpilla. Sherry Lugers was in charge of the dance which transformed the gymnasium into a castle atmosphere.

Other Homecoming events surrounding the weekend include the judging of floats made by each of the classes. The senior float was judged to be the best during the halftime ceremonies of the Homecoming game which Groves played against Oak Park. The float consisted of a falcon, the Groves symbol, sitting on a gold crown. Surrounding the crown were Oak Park players bowing down to the falcon. The theme of the float was "Falcon's Reign."

Second place in the Homecoming float judging went to the junior class project which was built around the theme, "Bury Them—Here Lies Oak Park." The float, pulled by a bear, consisted of a casket filled with an Oak Park player.

Third place went to the sophomore class float which consisted of a Groves football player pushing a can of Raid at the opposing team. The theme of this float was "Kill 'Em Dead." Freshmen prepared a float consisting of a paper mache dog eating dog food and Oak Park players. The inscription on this float was "Eat 'Em."

PLANS continue to be made for Groves' first dramatic production of the year, the English play by J. B. Priestley, "The Linden Tree." The play deals with a professor who is considered to be too old to teach. It tries to prove that old age does not mean incapability when it comes to doing a job well. Tickets for the play will be available from now until the play performance.

Miss Katy Bigge, dramatics instructor and play director, commenting on the amount of time that has gone into preparing the play for presentation, says that she has held Saturday work sessions with the cast and stage members in order to get the play ready. Jane Upward is assisting Miss Bigge as student director of the play.

JANE MEAD, editor of the Scriber, Groves' newspaper, attended the recent press association convention held at the University of Detroit where she had the opportunity to interview Michigan's Attorney General Frank Kelly. During her interview, Jane spoke with Mr. Kelly with regard to his viewpoints on the civil rights crisis about which Kelly expressed the hope that high school students would be more active and vocal in their support of what is right.

Others attending the conference from Groves included Paul Hazen, Ken Zimmerman and Karen Palmer. Girls' football season at Groves has almost come to a close. The victorious senior team, which defeated the junior team in a recent game, is slated to play Bloomfield High School soon, but with the exception of this very little remains of girls' football except sore muscles and bruises.

Coached by Miss Frances Pulley, the senior team defeated the junior squad, coached by Mr. George Landino and Mr. Allan Levy. The junior team had earlier eliminated the sophomores from competition by defeating them.

The first six-club meeting of the year was held last Thursday. Advisors for the club are Mr. Marvin Parent and Mr. John Zakins. Plans for the future of the club include trips to Wallon Hills and skiing at Mount Christie as well as sponsoring a sock-hop after the first basketball game on Nov. 29.
