

Sailing Seven Seas With Books in Hand

By MARIE CAIN

Time was that satisfactory academic achievement, a high school diploma and adequate tuition could get one into the college of her choice. Ann Bullock had all of these, plus! She knew that the college of her choice required something more—a passport.

Equipped with hospital birth certificate Ann went to the county courthouse in Pontiac to apply for the necessary document, only to discover that her hospital certificate did not meet red-tape demands. Frantic letters and phone calls to her birthplace, Akron, O., produced the vital statistic barely in time to prepare for her college career aboard a ship.

Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Bullock of Tilbury Road, was among the 500 students answering roll-call Oct. 22 when the "University of the Seven Seas" departed from New York to travel around the world.

Mr. and Mrs. Bullock returned recently to Birmingham from a west coast trip which took them to San Francisco, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City and Goleta, Calif. (suburb of Santa Barbara), where they were houseguests of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Taylor, former local residents of Shadow Lane on Gilbert Lake. The Bullocks were in New York to see daughter Ann off and, while there, attended a reception at the Shelton Towers given by the university for students, their families and faculty members.
